Georgia Power Plants Barred to Public as Defense Measure

Order Is Issued By Arkwright; Dangers Cited

Executive Hopes Rule Will Be Understood as Necessity.

Georgia Power Company, on order of President P. S. Arkwright, yesterday clamped the locks tight on the doors of their hydroelectric and steam plants, dams, tunnels, intakes and main substations throughout the state as a public defense measure.

The utilities company, according to Arkwright, has in the past encouraged the visits of tourists through their plants.

The power company operates as a biggest part of its system 22 hydro-electric plants and 17 steam plants through the state.

Tallulah Plant Largest.
The largest individual plant is the Tallulah Falls plant, which has a 108,000-horsepower capacity.

The decision to lock the doors to the public apparently came with surprising suddenness, for in the latest issue of the company publication, "Two Bells," published July 8, the company extended an invitation to the public to visit its Tallulah Falls plant.

Mr. Arkwright's statement follows:
"As a measure of co-operation with the national preparedness program, and in accordance with suggestions made by the Federal Power Commission and other governmental agencies, effective immediately, the Georgia Power Company will until further notice prohibit any visitors from its hydro-electric plants, steam plants, dams, tunnels, intakes and main substations throughout the state.

"This emergency precaution is not an independent and exclusive action of the Georgia Power Company, but is in keeping with a nationwide trend. Similar regulations already have been put into effect by the Tennessee Valley Authority on all its properties, and by other electric companies in all sections of the United States.

Fishing Permitted.
"In fact, our company has always been more liberal with its privileges to the public than the great majority of other similar companies. We have always, in the past, not only welcomed our customers and the public generally when they showed a desire to visit our plants and properties, but have issued them urgent invitations to do so.

"We want this new rule, therefore, to be understood by our customers and other friends as a necessary and patriotic step, not as any arbitrary unwillingness on our part to have them visit our properties as they have done in the past.

"For the benefit of fishermen and others who frequently find pleasure and recreation on our lakes, I wish to add that these restrictions do not apply to the lakes in their entirety, but only to such portions of the lakes as are adjacent or near to dams, power houses and other physical structures which it has been found expedient to provide with extra protection for the time being."

Windsor Appointed Bahamas Governor

Former King's Salary Will Be $12,000 a Year at the Isle Off Florida; Duke and Duchess Are Now in Portugal.

LONDON, July 9.—(AP)—The Duke of Windsor, royal wanderer on the road of romance, tonight was named governor and commander-in-chief of the Bahamas, British island playgrounds off the coast of Florida.

The ex-king and his American commoner wife, the former Wallis Warfield Simpson, fled from their exile home in France to Spain, then Portugal, in advance of the Nazi tide last month.

They now are in Lisbon, and it was presumed they would go directly to Nassau, capital of the sunny Bahamas.

The duke's appointment carries a salary of about $12,000 a year, life in a capital of 20,000 depending mostly on tourist trade, places the ex-king and his duchess within 300 miles of the America they wished to visit in November, 1937, but decided otherwise because of unfavorable reaction from American labor groups.

War, at long last, brought him back to England in September. It gave him something useful to do when he was appointed chief liaison officer between the British and French armies. He relinquished that post June 6.

As commander-in-chief of the Bahamas, his duties should be light since no regular British troops are on the islands, many of them uninhabited. The police force consists of six officers and 124 men.

Teachers' Pay Two Are Held For 4 Months In McDonough Is Authorized Double Slaying

State Education Board Also Approves Plan To Aid Defense.

The State Board of Education yesterday authorized the payment of school teachers for four months of the next school term, beginning with September, and took the following action:

1. Approved a plan for giving vocational training in Georgia in connection with the emergency national defense program and applied to the federal government for $200,000 to carry on the training. The plan must now be approved by the United States office of education.

2. Elected Judge Alvan H. Freeman, of Newnan, as chairman of the board for the year 1940 and 1941 after Governor Rivers declined re-election because his tenure on the board would run for only six months, H. C. Williams, of Adrian, was named vice chairman.

To Study Institutions.
3. Appointed a committee headed by Dr. M. D. Collins, state superintendent, and M. D. Mobley, director of vocational education, to make a survey of four state institutions now under jurisdiction of the welfare department and make recommendations for improving their educational opportunities.

4. Adopted a report by Dr. Collins explaining that the textbook division of the school department was free of debt and that after all books have been purchased for the year 1940-41, there would be a surplus of approximately $300,000 in the textbook fund which would be transferred to the equalization fund for paying teachers' salaries and aiding rural education.

In authorizing payment of teachers for the first four months of the next school term, the board announced they would be paid longer if funds are available.

Survey These Schools.
The four state institutions which the special committee will survey are the Georgia Academy for the Blind at Macon; the Georgia School for the Deaf at Cave Spring; the Georgia Training School for Boys at Milledgeville, and the Georgia Training School for Girls in Atlanta.

Stimson Given Confirmation Vote by Senate

Barkley Cites Need for Unity; Georgians Fail To Ballot.

By The Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 9.—President Roosevelt's nomination of Henry L. Stimson, Republican, to be secretary of war was confirmed by the senate today, 56 to 28, after Majority Leader Barkley, of Kentucky, had urged such approval in the "interests of American unity."

Senators who had bitterly criticized the appointment as a "step toward war" conceded that similar confirmation would be voted tomorrow for Frank Knox, Republican, selected for the key national defense post of secretary of the navy.

Party Lines Split.
Party lines split wide open on the Stimson vote with 45 Democrats, 10 Republicans and 1 Independent approving and 14 Democrats, 12 Republicans, 1 Progressive and 1 Farmer-Laborite opposing.

Senators George and Russell, of Georgia, announced they were for the confirmation, but did not cast a recorded vote.

Senator Barkley, confident he had the necessary votes, used only a few minutes to reply to two days of caustic criticism of the nominations. He said the chief objections to Stimson were that he had advocated repeal of the neutrality act, use of his country's naval bases for the British fleet, and naval convoy of munitions for England.

Disagrees in View.
"I would, myself, disagree with that view," Barkley said and then added that neither Stimson nor Knox could do these things as cabinet members unless they were authorized by congress.

Earlier, crowds who jammed the senate galleries to listen to the crackling debate were threatened with expulsion when they hissed and applauded.

The applause came as Senator Tydings, Democrat, Maryland, protesting the "stripping of our defenses" to aid Great Britain, engaged in a brisk exchange with Senator Pepper, Democrat, Florida, advocate of "every aid short of war" for England.

Pepper, after denying he favored a declaration of war against Germany, said Henry Ford, automobile manufacturer, should be forced by act of congress to manufacture airplane engines for England.

Georgia Democratic Delegates Named for 10 Convention Posts

Six Committee Berths, Four Honorary Offices Won; Harris Platform Body Member, Chairman Howell Reveals.

By The Associated Press.
Members of Georgia's delegation have been named to six committees and four honorary offices of the Democratic national convention at Chicago, Chairman Clark Howell announced yesterday.

Major Howell, editor and publisher of The Atlanta Constitution, said Speaker Roy V. Harris, of the Georgia house of representatives, would be a member of the important resolution and platform committee, while State Auditor Zach Arnold, vice chairman of the Georgia Democratic executive committee, will act on the equally important credentials committee.

Other Appointments.
Other appointments included: State Senator H. Dixon Smith, of Columbus, member of the committee on permanent organization.

John J. Bouhan, of Savannah, member of the committee on rules and order of business.

Cason J. Callaway, of Hamilton, chairman of the state board of regents, member of the committee to notify the nominee for president.

State Senator Paul Lindsay, of Decatur, member of the committee to notify the nominee for vice president.

Honorary Vice President.
Scott Candler, of Decatur, honorary vice president of the convention.

Mrs. Fred Stowe, of Toccoa, secretary of the Georgia state Democratic executive committee, honorary secretary of the convention.

Mrs. Clem Rainey, of Dawson, honorary assistant secretary of the convention.

Major Howell said the Georgia special train would leave Union station, Atlanta, at 4 o'clock Atlanta time, Saturday, arriving in Chicago at 9 o'clock the following morning.

U. S. Gives Clearance To More Child Refugees
WASHINGTON, July 9.—(AP)—President Roosevelt said today he understood that clearance had been granted for a large number of British refugee children who have not yet been brought over to this country.

Discussing contentions that the United States government had been slow in issuing visas for the entry of such children, he suggested that first consideration should be given to the question of how many could be brought in by the available shipping.

WOMAN WINS MEDAL.
LONDON, July 9.—(AP)—King George VI awarded the medal of the Order of the British Empire tonight to Mrs. Nora Cardwell, who with "great pluck and presence of mind" captured a German aviator who parachuted from his disabled plane into her front yard yesterday.

6,000 Witness Soap Box Race At West Point

Wilbur White, of Lanett, Comes in First on Muddy Track.

By CAROLYN MCKENZIE.
Undaunted by threatening showers, more than 6,000 persons lined Lanier hill in West Point yesterday to witness one of "the valley's" largest soap box races and cheer for Wilbur White, Lanett, Ala., lad, who won the event.

The youthful White piloted his speedster down the slippery quarter-mile track in 40 seconds flat to take first place.

Tingling with excitement, the crowd hastened to and from their automobiles as the rain came with the climax of the races. But these spectators, governed foremost by their interest in the midget racers, swarmed back to the track as the last heats came up.

Friends of White gathered around to extend congratulations as his mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. White, worked their way through the crowd to praise their young son.

Bill Ennis, last year's champion, officially opened the event with a dash down the hill in his famous "Johnson Sea Horse." Spectators called it the "longest" race in the country. With ramps constructed over the Alabama line, the midget racers sped out of one state and into another.

Harry Hariz, famed automobile racer, winner of the Indianapolis Speedway classic and holder of the 1929 title of national automobile racing champion, came into Atlanta for the trip over to West Point.

Joe Howell Jr., came in second to win the "B" class, runner-up for city championship and winner of the award for the most attractive car. Under the supervision of Rhodon Johnson, local director of the West Point race, he constructed a midget racer which will come to Atlanta July 27 along with Wilbur White and his speed winner.

Italians Pursued.
The announcer added that the Italians were being pursued and it was implied that the action continued.

An Italian version of the same fight, reported by Reuters: from the Stefani account in Rome, said the battle "ragged" for five one-half hours, then continued.

Last of French Fleet Is Swept Off High Seas

Rome Battleship Is Hit in Long Range Duel Lasting All Night.

By The Associated Press.
British and Italian surface war fleets and warplane clashed today in the new battle of the Mediterranean, fighting fiercely for control of the vital sea routes from Gibraltar to the Suez.

Powerful naval squadrons thundered against each other for the first time last night in the blue waters in a smoke-screened battle of long-range shelling that lasted through the night.

Today news agencies of both sides reported damage to the other fleet's ships—and each said the enemy squadron fled, not pursued.

Three separate engagements were reported: East of Gibraltar just below the "boot" of Italy, near the island of Crete in the eastern Mediterranean, south of Greece.

Altogether, the British claimed a long-range shell hit on an Italian capital ship and listed four Italian airplanes shot down and seven others badly damaged.

Accounts Differ.
Reuters, British news agency, dispatches from Rome listed the Italian claims by the Italian Stefani news agency as one British cruiser sunk, a battleship and an aircraft carrier damaged, and other British warships bombed from the air.

Perhaps the most significant engagement was the action between the two fleets in the mid-Mediterranean, off Cap Spartivento, extreme southern point of the Italian "boot."

Meanwhile the Italian government radio reported that the 42 100-ton British battle cruiser Hood had gone into dry dock at Gibraltar for "urgent repairs" after being damaged seriously in the battle of Oran, July 3.

The British admiralty said British squadron encountered two Italian battleships (Italy has six) and several eight-inch and six-inch gun cruisers and destroyers.

With details of the fighting sketchy, the admiralty reported that:

"Almost immediately after contact was gained, the enemy retired behind a smoke screen laid by their destroyers, but before the enemy was obscured one hit of extreme range was obtained by one of our capital ships on an Italian battleship."

The announcer added that the Italians were being pursued and it was implied that the action continued.

An Italian version of the same fight, reported by Reuters: from the Stefani account in Rome, said the battle "ragged" for five one-half hours, then continued.

Georgia Saves $2,800,000 by Purchasing Act

Supervisor of Purchases Reports Savings of 17 Per Cent.

Georgia saved $2,823,704.82 on total purchases of $16,237,059.66 for all departments of state government for the fiscal year ended June 30, which was the first year under the central purchasing act 1939. O. G. Glover, supervisor of purchases, reported yesterday Governor Rivers.

The percentage of savings to the total net purchases for the year was 17.7 per cent, he said.

Greatest amount of purchases was for the State Highway Department, which had a total of $1,944,558.59 for the year. Savings for this department were $342,422.79. The Department of Confederate Pensions and the smallest amount of purchases, with a total of $259.60.

Divided into quarters, the purchases were as follows: First quarter, $2,700,166.41; second quarter, $3,033,843.46; third quarter, $4,226,324.84; and fourth quarter, $660,785.85.

Specification Writers.

In making his report, Glover said it was his intention to employ specification writers to cooperate with the various departments of government in writing specifications. He said he thought this was a step toward making the purchasing department more effective.

"Previously," he said, "each department of government and each institution has been writing its own specifications. I believe that by employing specification writers to co-operate with the various departments we can be of considerable more assistance to them."

Glover explained he did not want to leave the impression that the department had closed the door without making a single mistake.

"I want it thoroughly understood," he said, "that we have made mistakes, but if you will add up all the mistakes we have made and deduct them from the actual savings, we have then shown a saving of close to $2,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30."

Expresses Thanks.

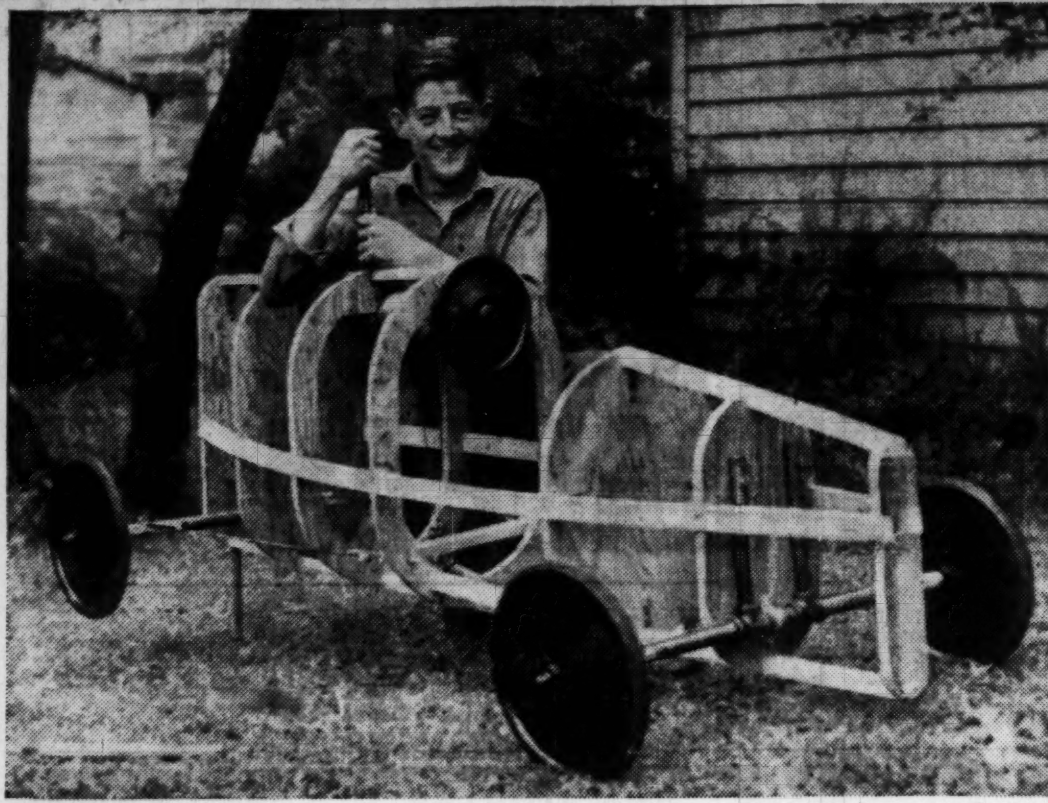

He expressed his thanks to the heads of the various divisions of the purchasing department and entire personnel for their co-operation, as well as to state department heads.

Supervisors in Glover's department are J. J. Mangham Jr., assistant supervisor in charge of buying for state capital departments and eleemosynary institutions; O. W. Passavant, assistant supervisor in charge of buying paper and printing; N. J. Covart, assistant supervisor in charge of buying for state colleges; H. L. Umlow, chief engineer in charge of institutional buying; W. W. Williams, assistant supervisor in charge of buying for the highway department; C. H. Kilpatrick, assistant supervisor in charge of buying for highway department; B. Fite, chief accountant; H. Gay, senior accountant; Tom Isdom, director of inventories; Aaron Cohen, general buyer, and Dennis Penny, assistant supervisor in charge of University of Georgia buying.

Rivers, Hartsfield Accept Bids to TVA Ceremonies

Governor Rivers and Mayor Hartsfield yesterday accepted invitations for the state and Atlanta respectively, to attend opening ceremonies for the ten lakes in the TVA development, in Chattanooga, during the weekend, August 31 through September 2.

Mrs. John F. Barksdale, assistant publicity director for the Tennessee Valley Corporation, extended the invitation to the officials and other leaders of Georgia on a visit here.

Civilians Find Army Shoes Tough on Dogs

Ankles Suffer Most; Corporal Teaches Trainees To Roll Packs.

(Pictures on Page 22.)

By HAROLD MARTIN.

Fort McPherson's citizen-soldiers by yesterday had begun to realize that soldiers' shoes can be mighty tough on civilian feet.

In fact some of the 136 business and professional men who have donned the khaki for a 30-day period of training under the watchful eye of Lieutenant Colonel Clifford R. Jones, of the regular army, have begun to suspect that Uncle Sam has draped their dogs in plaster casts that resemble shoes.

It's the ankles that suffer most, even though rain has kept the trainees' walking so far confined to strolling over to the camp exchange for a package of cigarettes.

Herbert C. Foster, Memphis manufacturer, mincing through the mud in a pair of dogs that looked like large brown fiddle-cases probably expressed the sentiments of his brethren in arms yesterday when he uttered a loud, if good-humored squawk about the way his dogs were suffering.

To Try Saddle Soap.

"I had forgotten about how these things felt," the last time I wore them in 1919. It is like thrusting your feet into a couple of concrete blocks and then walking off with them. The ankles are the part that suffers. A man wearing slippers all his life has a hard time getting used to a lot of leather laced up around his ankles. Take them off at night and you have to look to see if your feet didn't come off with them. I am going to get me some saddle soap and see if that won't soften them up some. If that doesn't work I'm going to chew them soft, like an Eskimo squaw munching on walrus hide."

Beside the fact that their feet are bothering them a little, the civilian trainees in what Lieutenant Colonel Jones calls "the most unique military activity in United States history," are doing fine.

In picking up the language of the military way of life rapidly, and they salute with such vigor there is some danger of snapping an arm off at the elbow.

"What's going on," Trainee Fred O. Barrow, Rockmart druggist, was asked as he lounged in the doorway of E Company's barracks.

"Nothing but a lotta bunk fatigue," Trainee Barrow replied like an old army man.

Bunk fatigue is army vernacular for just lying around in barracks doing nothing, which is what the boys did most of yesterday. But a week ago Druggist Barrow wouldn't have known the term from a Sanskrit phrase.

Unusual Eagerness.

There is an eagerness about the businessmen soldiers, the officers note, that they don't find among youngsters who come to CMTC. They spend a lot of time trying to learn things. For instance, yesterday when Corporal Smith, a regular, got through hanging up a large canvas water bag with metal faucets placed on it in such a way its resemblance to the productive portions of a cow was obvious, they invited him in to show them how to roll a pack.

Corporal Smith was not reluctant. Rolling a pack was one of the things for which he was renowned, he said, modestly, pushing his fatigue cap back on his head and hitching up the slack in his baggy mechanics' coveralls.

"You take this thing here and you throw it over thisaway, and you take this dash-dash-dash flap and throw it over like this and you put t' pegs here and you roll t' whole blank-blank blank business up tight pushin' down witha knees like this and t' blank blank thing is rolled. I am on maneuvers four months and I never sleep in a bed so I can roll one like rollin' a blank blank cigar."

The trainees stood solemnly around observing this procedure, mentally winnowing the grains of essential information out of the flow of picturesque language and then laboriously got down on their knees and emulated the actions of Corporal Smith.

Use Corporal's Language.

Unfortunately, some were strongly tempted to emulate the language of Corporal Smith before they gave up the struggle and asked for more instruction. Rolling a pack, like driving a team of mules, seems best accomplished when accompanied by verbal fireworks.

Formal induction into the life of a soldier came yesterday at the Post theater, with dignitaries addressing the group.

Station Principal Speaker.

Former Governor John M. Slaton, civilian aide to the secretary of war for the fourth corps area, delivered the main address.

"Few nations," he told his hearers, "ever fell before a foreign foe. Most conquered nations lost their liberty because of internal decay. Your presence here is a hopeful indication that there is strength of fiber left in the men of these United States."

"You come here to learn what you can do of soldiering in the brief time that you will stay. But you will learn more. You will learn the value of the stronger virtues, the virtue of self-reliance, courage, obedience to discipline. Your presence here reveals that you already have the virtue of self-sacrifice for your country. Each of you, busy men, has given up something to come here. I wish that I were young enough to be one of you."

Other speakers were Mayor Hartsfield, Colonel Charles S. Vance, assistant adjutant general of the state of Georgia, representing Governor Rivers, Colonel Clifford C. Early, fourth corps area CMTC officer, and Major B. F. Hurlis, commander of Fort McPherson. The Rev. Herman L. Turner, chaplain of the 167th Infantry, Alabama national guard, delivered the invocation and the benediction. Lieutenant Colonel Jones introduced the speakers.

'Walton Ghoul Had Surgical Skill'—Doctor

Neighbors and Police Puzzled by Case of Opened Grave.

By WILLARD COPE.

LOGANVILLE, Ga., July 9.—The quiet-lived folk of this small community, pondering in sparse groups under shelter of the few stores and highway-side filling stations while rain fell relentlessly, found themselves late today without further clue to the awesome invasion of a grave at the town's entrance some time Sunday night, which medical and psychiatric annals indicated had a motive rarely encountered in the past century.

State patrolmen, Mayor L. T. Hodges, Police Chief A. L. Sellers and Dr. E. S. Floyd canvassed and analyzed all circumstances attending the ghastly digging open of the grave of Mrs. W. L. Bennett, 54, within a few hours of her burial, but were unable to penetrate the mystery with the evidence at hand.

Warped Mind Indicated.

The term, "necrophilia," defining a phrenetic aberration, believed to be indicated by the circumstances attending the breaking open of the casket after the inhabitants of this unusually staid community—just a few miles from Snellville, which has no jail and has never known an arrest.

It was clear that all local authorities faced a situation wholly without parallel here.

There were no suspects, beyond the belief of medical authorities that the evidence clearly established the strange crime had not been committed by a Negro. A quiet but careful investigation of every one's whereabouts on the night in question was said to have accounted satisfactorily for virtually all.

"The most puzzling aspect of all," declared Dr. Floyd, who had attended Mrs. Bennett for 30 years, "is that the person responsible unquestionably had what amounts to surgical skill. To have been determined as to dig open the grave, remove the lower part of the casket with an ax and then, with no more possible illumination than a flashlight, to use a sharp knife or like instrument in a careful manner, bespeaks a high intelligence gone wrong and a manual skill which staggers the imagination."

No Arrests Made.

At the close of the day, after probing every feature of the happening, Commissioner Lon E. Sullivan, of the state patrol, said he expected no immediate developments. It was somewhat officially denied that fingerprints had been taken, but the impression remained that careful photographing of the graveside Monday by Captain A. L. Hutchins and Trooper Lewis Brown had brought evidence of this character to light.

All officials emphasized that there had been no arrests although several persons had been questioned, and that there were no suspects. The town had returned to its peaceful attitude after the excitement of Monday, and no outbreak was feared.

"We are all saddened, and many naturally were incensed," Mayor Hodges declared, "but we expect the investigation to go forward in an orderly manner. Everyone here was a personal friend of Mrs. Bennett and wants to see justice done."

The newly built, neatly arranged "Sun-Lite Cafe," at the junction of the Lawrenceville and Atlanta-Monroe highways, remained closed as it had done since her death Saturday following a sudden stroke.

Family Secluded.

There was no visible movement within the bungalow beside the Loganville cemetery, almost within sight of her grave, where she had lived. A Chinaberry tree and many simple flowers in the small front yard dripped disconsolately in the rain. The family was withdrawn, and its sorrow was being respected by neighbors.

Investigators, delving through psychiatric history, were able to find but few instances of "necrophilia" recounted. The bibliography was limited to two German, two Italian and one English article on the subject. The two most famous cases involved a French sergeant in 1842 and a European religious devotee some years earlier.

Virtually no belief remained that a simple explanation could be found for the crime. Pains-taking use of fingerprints and checking of all persons who could have visited the vicinity was considered the only method of pursuit immediately available.

BERRIES FOR PROFIT.

SPANS CONTINENT IN 12 HOURS—A new record for commercial ships was set yesterday when Jack Zimmerman, chief pilot of TWA's eastern division, sped this four-motor, 23-ton stratoliner from Los Angeles to New York in 12 hours and 14 minutes. It was the giant ship's inaugural flight. Zimmerman is shown waving, reluctantly, to Actresses Brenda Joyce, left, and Nancy Kelly, two passengers.

Giant Air Liners Set Records in Crossing Nation

West-to-East Time 12 Hours; East-to-West, 14 Hours.

NEW YORK, July 9.—(P)—Two giant new air liners raced time through the stratosphere today and spanned the nation—from east to west and west to east—in record schedule.

Inaugurating upper level coast-to-coast passenger flights for transcontinental and western air express, each set new records for transport planes on scheduled passenger trips, although faster flights have been made by transport ships not on regular service.

First to "beat the clock" was the west-east stratoliner, when the four-motored, 23-ton, $450,000 Boeing craft landed at La Guardia airport at 9:29 a. m. (E. S. T.), an hour and 11 minutes ahead of schedule, completing the flight from Burbank Field, Los Angeles, in 12 hours and 14 minutes. Previous best time on a scheduled passenger flight, set March 16, 1935, by a TWA plane, was 12 hours, 44 minutes.

A sister ship reached Los Angeles from New York at 10:42 a. m. (E. S. T.), in 14 hours and nine minutes. The former transport record in scheduled flight, made in 1934, was 15 hours, 30 minutes.

Public Works Costs Running Above Budget

Fulton County Commissioners See Curtailment of Activities.

Expenses of the Fulton county public works department are running far above the anticipated expenditures in the budget, it was learned yesterday following an unannounced meeting of the county commissioners in the private office of the county attorney preceding a special open session at the courthouse.

Sums spent during June were greatly in excess of the amounts spent during May, when the deficit for the month was more than $2,000, it was said.

Discuss Budget.

Commissioners, called together by Chairman Ed Almand to discuss the budget situation in general, agreed that activities will have to be curtailed and that where some departments have not used their entire appropriation for the period additional sums can be transferred to balance departments with deficits.

J. A. Ragsdale, chairman of the public works committee, said that 21 employees carried on the public works pay roll are assigned to WPA work and that the WPA is going to credit the county with the amount of their full salaries as part of its contribution to projects.

Other commissioners said that the public works department had laid more asphalt and done more improvements in June because of

Record Ballot Is Indicated by Registration

Poll Indicates Presidential, Governor's Race Stirring Voters.

By The Associated Press.

Their interest stimulated by the presidential and governor's races, more Georgians than ever before apparently are preparing to vote in the forthcoming primary and general election.

Registrations in 78 of Georgia's 159 counties, furnished the Associated Press in a mail poll of the county ordinaries, last night stood at 290,857.

This compared with registrations two years ago in the same counties of 232,190 voters.

In the other 81 counties, there were 203,725 persons registered to vote in 1938.

Without taking into account any gain whatsoever in the registration figures of the missing counties this year, the state's total still would reach 494,582.

That compares with the 1938 registration of 435,915.

The previous high registration for Georgia was established in the last presidential year, 1936, when 515,379 persons qualified to vote.

HEMISPHERE DEFENSE

The Monroe Doctrine has been supplemented by the Declaration of Lima—Pan-American Republics are agreed on consultation and appropriate action in the face of threats of foreign nomination.

President Roosevelt has pledged defense of Canada. The American Republics have established a 300-mile "safety zone." Concerted action against "Fifth Column" penetration of American Republics is under way. Our government will not recognize any attempt by a foreign government to seize control of possessions of any other nation in the Western Hemisphere.

All of which means—the American continents will be defended to the last against Nazification.

But, how much do YOU know about the Central and South American Republics; their settlement, struggles for independence, changes in boundaries, changes in government?

If Americans—North, Central and South, from Canada to Patagonia—are to achieve any really unified front against the dangers which loom, the better the understanding which we in the U. S. A. have of these sister Republics, the more intelligently we can act.

The Constitution's Service Bureau, with a view to spreading wider knowledge of the Pan-American Republics, has prepared a unique and intensely interesting Pan-American Histo-Graph. On a single large graph in about 30 different shades of color, you can follow contemporary developments from the date of the first Spanish discoveries down to the present moment, the varied and thrilling history of each one of the sister-nations of this hemisphere. It provides a history of each and every American nation at a glance.

Supreme Court Strikes Clause In 'Jobless' Act

Holds It Denies Equal Protection as Constitutional Guarantee.

The Georgia Supreme Court declared unconstitutional yesterday a portion of the Georgia Unemployment Compensation law, holding it denied equal protection of the law as guaranteed by both state and federal constitutions.

The clause sought to define as an employer "any employing unit which, together with one or more employing units, is owned or controlled by the same interests."

The state Bureau of Unemployment Compensation sued the Independent Gasoline Company, Inc., for $103, charging it was controlled along with the N. D. Arnold Telephone Company, of Forsyth, Ga., by identical stockholders. The gasoline company employs five workers, the telephone company four.

Under state law, any concern with eight or more workers is liable for unemployment compensation taxes.

The court held no competitor of the concern having only five workers was subject to the tax, and added that to require the oil company to do so would impose a tax burden from which others similarly situated were exempt.

EXTENDS GAVEL—Joe Asher, retiring president of the Atlanta Exchange Club, extends the gavel of leadership to Holly Hogan, incoming president, at the installation of officers held at the club's weekly meeting yesterday in the Piedmont hotel. Other new officers are Ed Forio, vice president; C. W. May, secretary and treasurer. Retiring officers were Asher and Vann Jernigan, vice president; Guinn Mosley, secretary, and Charles Hammond, treasurer. The Rev. T. D. Morrison is the club chaplain. The offices of secretary and treasurer were combined at the past election.

Filipinos Organize A Reserve Legion

An organization of military reservists, which some political observers describe as having possibilities of being as politically influential as the American Legion in the United States, has been established in the Philippines.

The organization—the Reserve Officers' Legion of the Philippines—was created by an executive order of Commonwealth President Manuel L. Quezon. At present the organization is composed only of reserve Philippine army officers, but eventually it will embrace graduates of R. O. T. C. courses in colleges and universities, and all reservist graduates of Philippine army training camps.

It was estimated that by 1946 the organization would have a membership of some 25,000 reservist officers and 400,000 reservists. A membership drive is going on throughout the archipelago.

Although the constitution of the R. O. L. P. prohibits the legion as an organization or any members representing it from taking part in political campaigns or giving support to political candidates, some political quarters believe it not unlikely that the legion members would vote as a unit on political issues that may affect the legion's status.

These quarters said the American Legion's constitution barred the legion from active participation in politics, but this did not prevent it from exercising tremendous political influence or certain politicians from using the organization for political purposes.

Identity Files Go to Madison Patrol Offices

Transfers Made Because Barracks There Are Fireproof, Spacious.

Files of some 50,000 criminals and 20,000 civilians in the record division of the Georgia department of public safety's identification department are being transferred to Madison from Atlanta, Major Lon Sullivan said yesterday.

Sullivan said the moving should be completed by August 1, and added that the transfer is being made because the state patrol barracks at Madison are fireproof. The present headquarters here are not so protected.

Also, it was announced, the quarters here are vastly overcrowded, whereas the Madison barracks have a large amount of extra space.

The safety commissioner said he plans to send J. T. McKibben, B. G. Seabrook and B. G. Ragsdale, fingerprint classifiers, and possibly one stenographer to Madison. The department's investigating staff is to remain in Atlanta.

Operation of the record division will not be impaired by the change, Sullivan said, because the majority of inquiries are by mail. He added that it is hoped a training school can be established at Madison, where the barracks have been built with the idea of housing a gymnasium and target range, as well as a large number of men.

If and when a training school is built there Sullivan said the records likely would be returned to headquarters in Atlanta.

Rainbow Lights Designed for Park Fountain

Hurt Memorial Water Display Will Begin About Sept. 1.

Atlantans may see a perpetual rainbow when the giant new $15,000 electrical fountain is installed in the Joel Hurt Memorial park and the show place is formally opened to the public around September 1, William C. Pauley, landscape engineer in charge of installations for the parks department, said yesterday.

Water and colored lights will blend in one of the most beautiful artificial fountains in the entire south. Five major nozzle displays, taking on various patterns under changing light colors, will form the principal attraction in the city's only downtown park, fronting the municipal auditorium.

The center spray will rise 18 feet above the top of the fountain. This peak flow will be flanked on each side by two sprays rising 12 feet above the fountain top, and these latter will be guarded on each side by two other sprays, rising four feet above the top wall of the fountain.

As water patterns change, a curtain spray rising 11 feet above the top of the fountain will be formed, while the larger sprays continue to pour out water colored by the lights.

In addition, there will be half a dozen spray rings about the fountain, adding cooling sensations and pleasing light combinations.

From the time the show of the changing waters and lights begins until the presentation is completed, 12 minutes will have elapsed, and according to Pauley, it will be like an ever-changing artist's canvas.

The combination of water and light patterns will be one of the city's downtown show places. Lights will be blue, red, green and amber colored, and a row of colored lights will be hidden under the upper water basin, adding to the color scheme.

Cost of construction of the park will be about $60,000, not including the land, which was acquired by the municipality in an exchange of the old city hall property at Forsyth and Marietta streets.

The Joel Hurt Memorial Association is presenting the fountain to the city to aid in beautifying the tract.

Sweeping Challenge by Japanese Is Feared in Washington

President Says Fleet To Stay Near Hawaii

Hull and Japanese Envoy Call for Local Settlement.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—(AP)—A continuing controversy between American and Japanese military authorities in Shanghai was looked upon with growing concern in official quarters tonight, despite statements by both Secretary Hull and the Japanese ambassador that the matter should be settled locally.

Fears were expressed in some quarters that the Japanese army might seek to fan the incident into larger proportions in an effort to create a sweeping Asiatic challenge to foreign powers. The dispute grew out of the arrest by American marines of Japanese plainclothes gendarmes in the American sector of the International Settlement.

With far eastern events taking a more serious turn generally, President Roosevelt told reporters that there were no present plans to move the main body of the United States fleet from Hawaiian waters. There had been some speculation that it might be brought to the Panama Canal vicinity.

Secretary Hull called for usual prudence and reasonableness by local officials on both sides in adjusting the dispute.

Japanese military authorities, who were said to have apologized for entrance of the plainclothes men into the sector without previous notice, have demanded an apology from the United States commander for the arrests and alleged mistreatment.

Without indicating whether any instructions had been sent to Shanghai officials, Secretary Hull said he was inquiring into the incident and awaiting fuller information before determining what steps, if any, he would take.

The Japanese ambassador, Ken-kuke Horinouchi, who called at the State Department, also told newsmen he thought the incident would and should be settled locally. The ambassador said his conference with Assistant Secretary Adolf Berle concerned commercial questions and they had not brought up the Shanghai incident.

President Roosevelt's comment on the fleet was regarded as an indication of continued American concern in the far east, including the future status of French Indo-China and the Netherlands East Indies.

System Worries Japan.

Meanwhile, Japan was said to be concerned over the new United States export licensing system imposing a virtual embargo on some war materials needed in the American defense program.

The Japanese ambassador said he made inquiries about this along with other "technical" commercial questions during his conference today with Berle.

The curtailment of American machine tool exports was understood to be Japan's chief concern. The licensing system has not been applied to scrap iron, another important Japanese war import from this country.

British, Italian Fleets Fight for Mediterranean

through the night with Italian ships chasing the British to the south.

To the west, the British admiralty reported, another British force swept eastward from Gibraltar toward the central Mediterranean. This force sighted no surface ships but was credited with bagging four Italian planes and damaging seven others.

Third Engagement. The third engagement, Reuters said, was described by Stefani as taking place Monday off the island of Crete. Reuters quoted this Stefani account:

"On Monday an Italian airplane, carrying out reconnaissance work, reported that a British squadron was navigating in the Mediterranean near the island of Candia (Crete).

"The squadron was composed of one battleship, two cruisers and an aircraft carrier.

"Italian air formations, after a flight of 500 miles across the sea, reached the enemy and dropped heavy calibre bombs despite anti-aircraft fire and an attempt by the enemy to put out a smoke screen.

"A battleship and an aircraft carrier were damaged and a cruiser was sunk."

The only previous British-Italian sea fight occurred June 27, when a light British naval ship sank the Italian destroyer Espero.

The admiralty said, however, that simultaneously with the operations in the central Mediterranean, other forces based on the stronghold at Gibraltar carried out a sweep toward the central Mediterranean.

Four enemy aircraft were destroyed by this latter force, the official story said. Seven others were damaged, with three "unlikely to return to their base."

This unit of the British force did not meet surface vessels, the admiralty said.

Huge Richelieu Disabled.

The British also accounted for the newest French battleship, the 35,000-ton Richelieu. A motorboat and naval airplanes disabled the Richelieu in Dakar harbor with depth bombs and aerial torpedoes.

Only a few scattered French warships are believed still at large. The few vessels which escaped the first British thrust at the French navy off Algiers last Wednesday are reported in French naval bases, some of them disabled.

Royal air force bombers, lashing at Germany's naval forces set on fire two enemy warships during raids on the Kiel and Wilhelmshaven bases.

The British took on the chin more bomb attacks from Germany and at least eight persons were reported killed.

War Costs Rise.

The war effort is costing Great Britain $38,000,000 every day, Sir Kingsley Wood, chancellor of the exchequer, told the house of commons. A new vote of credit for 1,000,000,000 pounds (about $4,000,000,000) was granted immediately.

From Rome came word that the Axis Allies have chosen their respective jobs in the assault on Britain.

Rumania and Hungary kept up their feverish military preparations on the Transylvania border, and Premier Count Pal Teleki and Foreign Minister Count Istvan Cskaky, of Hungary, went to Berlin to visit the German government.

Diplomatic quarters in Budapest said a preliminary agreement had been reached between Hungary and the Axis powers by which Germany and Italy would call on Rumania to give up a slice of Transylvania to Hungary.

Defeated France moved toward totalitarian statehood. The Vichy government of Premier Marshal Petain was given a free hand by parliament to write a new constitution. The action sealed the doom of the third French republic.

French Desperate. The vote of the French chamber of deputies and senate, born of defeat and desperation, gave the Petain government authority to frame its own laws and constitution, then create its own national assembly to ratify them.

The measure, voted with only four negative voices raised against it, declared the new constitution "must guarantee the rights of labor, family and country."

The chamber vote was 395 to 3, the senate, 225 to 1.

LaGrange Water Pipes, 50 Years' Old, Replaced

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. LAGRANGE, Ga., July 9.—Even for the water pipes the first 50 years seem the hardest!

Water mains laid in LaGrange in 1893, almost a half-century ago, are just now needing replacement, and a total of 1,344 feet of pipe is being laid in the uptown section of the city, City Engineer George Sargent said. Although the old main is still in fair condition, the new pipes are being placed to prevent recurrence of breaks experienced during the severe cold of last winter.

Nazi Preparedness, Efficiency Key to War Success---Lochner

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

BERLIN, July 9.—(AP)—The question I have been asked most frequently since returning from four trips to the zone of operations in the west is:

"How do you explain Germany's military success?"

Though all of these trips were undertaken since the start of the great offensive May 10, invariably I must point out that I am no military expert. My views simply are those of an observing layman.

Yet it seems to me certain facts are obvious to anyone who, like myself, could move freely among the troops, go to the very front lines, see what the retreating armies left behind and how they left it, and talk to prisoners of war.

In a nutshell, it can be stated that perhaps no nation ever was prepared more completely, more scientifically and with greater attention to detail than was Germany. Strategy also played a leading role.

Better Explosives.

Beyond that Germany had the dreaded Stukas (dive-bombers), weapons for which the Allied powers apparently had no match. It also seems German shells and bombs were filled with explosives more effective than anything the world had seen.

I shall try to develop more concretely various ideas gathered during my visits to the front.

Take, for instance, Germany's system of communications. Various officers agreed in telling me that, during the gigantic tank fights, every Nazi tank was connected with the surrounding ones and with the airforce above by wireless.

This meant that the Stukas' descent to the scene of a tank battle could be timed in such a way that the bombs fell at the critical moment and onto the Allied tank most dangerous to the German force.

During artillery duels, such as that which preceded the fall of Dunkerque, I noticed German scouting planes directed the Nazi artillery fire by wireless. The French, on the other hand, seemed content to fire antiaircraft guns at the German planes.

Again, in observing an encounter between English and German forces from the heights of Renaix on June 2, I noticed German planes directing the German artillery, while on the opposing side no planes were visible in the air.

Communications also were maintained between the Stukas and the lighting-like "blue devils," infantry on motorcycles which emitted a special smoke making them practically invisible. And I understand, though I did not happen to see it myself, that even the infantry on foot had soldiers with earphones and radio equipment communicating as they marched along.

Smooth System.

The German army stressed not only technical communication, but attached equal importance to connections with the rear. One of the strongest impressions I took with me from each trip was the smooth functioning of the reinforcement system.

Each unit's route of march and distance to be covered was stated precisely. On many occasions soldiers told me they had not slept for several days.

"We know that if we don't arrive at such-and-such a place our comrades will be left in the lurch, while those following us will have their plans upset," they said. "So there's only one thing to do—get where we have been ordered to go."

Equally ever-present were German ambulances, ready to take care of the wounded immediately. Another organization much in evidence was the Nazi Welfare League, with soup kitchens, huge stacks of bread and other edibles for civilian populations.

An impressive thing to me was not only the fact that the general staff, in preparing for this war, had thought of the most minute detail, but that all organizations, whether military or civilian, dovetailed their activities so effectively.

CHICKEN WITH A FUSE. ELBERTON, Ga., July 9.—(AP) R. C. Palmer dressed a chicken the other day, and found an automobile light fuse in its gizzard.

Huge Richelieu Was Crippled By Daredevils

Boat Slipped Under Battleship's Stern to Drop Depth Bombs.

LONDON, July 9.—(UP)—The British navy has put out of commission France's most powerful battleship by a feat of personal daring comparable to the heroic exploit of Richmond Pearson Hobson at Santiago bay in the Spanish-American war, it was revealed today.

How the new 35,000-ton Richelieu, "the most modern and formidable capital ship in the world," was surprised in the little harbor at Dakar, French West Africa, and rendered helpless was disclosed by First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander before the house of commons. The action, he said, took place yesterday.

Alexander said the British commander sent an ultimatum demanding that the Richelieu be surrendered, disarmed, scuttled or face battle. The French defied the ultimatum and were on their guard, making all the more spectacular the action which followed.

A single ship's boat, manned by a lieutenant commander and a handful of volunteers, put off from a British warship, worked its way through harbor defenses and slipped under the guns of the giant floating fortress. Close under the stern of the Richelieu the British sailors dropped depth bombs which with a roar crippled the battleship's propellers and rudder.

With the Richelieu helpless to maneuver, British seaplanes then swooped in and made the kill with aerial torpedoes. Five heavy explosions followed in rapid succession. The Richelieu, mortally stricken, listed and went down by the stern.

The boat's crew, which had made this possible, almost paid with their lives. When they started away from the Richelieu, their boat broke down and drifted helplessly. Just as the French discovered the boat, one of its engines started again and it was able to escape.

Hobson In 1898.

Richmond Pearson Hobson, a young lieutenant in the United States navy, won fame for personal heroism when he commanded the collier Merrimac, sunk in the entrance to Santiago Bay in 1898 under the heavy fire of Spanish guns. For his feat Hobson became the "most kissed man" in the United States and later a rear admiral.

The British navy's newest hero is Lieutenant Commander R. H. Bristowe. His feat equalled those of fabled sailing ship days, when the tradition of the British navy was born. With his little boat filled with bombs, even a rifle shot would have been sufficient to blow him and his men to atoms had they been discovered by the French.

He no doubt will be knighted by King George and promoted for the Dakar exploit.

The Richelieu's armament comprised eight 15-inch guns, 15 six-inch guns, numerous antiaircraft guns and four planes. Its speed was in excess of 30 knots and its total weight of armor, 15,000 tons. It had been completed just before the French-German armistice and was believed off the west coast of Africa on trial runs when French hostilities against Germany ceased.

Better buy NOW— And get Top Value for your Money

It's pretty conclusive proof of a real value when more people than ever before buy a certain make of car in a single year.

That is true of this 1940 Buick.

It's pretty good proof of value when a higher percentage of all new-car buyers selects that car after looking the field over.

That is also true of this 1940 Buick.

So on sheer value, it should be clear that right now, "Best buy's Buick"—the question we'd like to ask is: Isn't this also the best time to buy?

Isn't this the smart time to put yourself behind a brand-new power plant, husky, thrifty, thrilling—and smoother than ever?

Isn't this a smart time to get more room—up-to-date controls—sure, soft brakes—new rubber—springing that never needs lubrication—truly modern features (Buick has no less than six dozen)—

Kin of Atlantan Is Inventor of Ray Telescope

Dr. Lukiesh Believes Device Might Aid Nation in War.

A telescope of limitless range which picks up only ultra-violet rays has been invented by Dr. Matthew Lukiesh, director of a light research laboratory at Cleveland, Ohio, and brother of W. Frank Lukiesh, district manager of a photographic supply house here.

The telescope, described in dispatches from Cleveland as "an essentially simple arrangement of lenses and a screen to receive the ultra-violet rays," will pick up such rays anywhere that they are not hidden by the horizon.

"By going up in an airplane," Dr. Lukiesh said, "the horizon can be limitlessly extended and the range of the telescope correspondingly increased."

Though practical uses of the device still are undeveloped, the inventor said there was little doubt that it could be of service in time of war.

In fact, he first thought of such a telescope while serving as a dollar-a-year man as chairman of camouflage development for the National Research Council during the first World War.

Troopship Use Seen.

"It could be useful in conveying darkened troopships, for the pilots could signal back and forth with ultra violet light, free from much danger that enemy submarines would see the signals," he said.

"You can intercept the radio, telegraph and telephone, but you can't intercept ultra-violet signals without this device, or one like it," he pointed out. In order that no other nation learns the secret of its construction, he is keeping all but the barest details of how it is made "off the record."

Dr. Lukiesh, one of the world's leading authorities on light, is well known to Atlantans in the electrical field. While visiting his brother here last fall, he spoke before the Illuminating Engineering Society here, at a meeting to which all distributors of electrical equipment were invited.

Americans in every walk of life know devices which Dr. Lukiesh has invented. Some of them are windowless houses, germ-killing lamps, X-ray diagnosis of materials in industry, and the sun-lamp for a winter-time indoor tan.

His fertile mind—"he has the brains, I have the looks for the family," says his brother Frank—is still exploring the undiscovered realms of the science of light.

"Perhaps beyond the horizon are motion picture theaters of past history," he speculated. "Traveling through space there may be scenes emitted in the form of patterns of electro-magnetic energy ever since there was light on earth. A super-telescope of enormous electrical magnification may bring them to our screens—not merely events of today but of yesterday and eons past."

"There may be new horizons in the offing that can bring us thrills even though we have become blasé."

Highway "Ribbon" Light.

Also beyond the horizon, but much nearer realization, are advances more objective in their nature. One is a "ribbon of light" highway network, illuminated by super lamps which would make an automobile's headlights useful only on side roads. Another is "light control" in biology, affecting the growth and even the species of plants.

Whatever "Dr. Matt" dreams of, his brother, Frank, and his friend, Tom Moore, who introduced him when he spoke here, believe he can invent.

"If he said he was going to make a camera that would bring back the picture of Mark Antony saying 'Howdy' to Cleopatra in her barge on the Nile, I wouldn't laugh," said Mr. Moore. "I'd figure he could do it."

INVENTOR—Dr. Matthew Lukiesh, of Cleveland, one of the world's foremost authorities on light, and brother of W. Frank Lukiesh, of Atlanta, has invented a telescope of limitless range which picks up only ultra-violet rays. He thinks it can be of use as a signaling device in wartime.

Bonded Debt Of 27 Millions Listed for State

Arnold Report Shows School Obligation of $3,910,132.

Georgia had a bonded debt of $27,280,656.90 at the end of the fiscal year on June 30, and a school obligation of $3,910,132.78, in addition to its lease contract obligations for Tattall prison and the Milledgeville hospital, it is shown in the annual report on budget operations by State Auditor Zach Arnold.

The bonded debt compared with $25,547,938.76 at the close of the fiscal year in 1938; $31,797,998.18 in 1936; $35,757,558 in 1934 and $9,973,703.17 in 1932, he pointed out.

Payment on $26,637,355.83 county refunding certificates included in the bonded debt items in 1934 is being retired at the rate of $2,660,000 per year, which began in 1936.

At the same time Arnold went into an explanation of another method for operating the state's financial machinery—one of several methods which will confront legislators at their next session.

Arnold already had pointed out that if the state's program of expanded services is to be financed fully, $7,515,811.71 in additional tax income will be needed provided allocations remain as they are.

However, in reviewing another condition, he said it would be possible to balance the state budget with the present tax income of $43,775,316.06, but it would mean that allocations to the highway department, to the counties for secondary roads and to the school equalization funds must be reduced to the 1934 level—thus releasing $7,863,742.50 for the expanded services.

Plan Explained.

Under this plan, sufficient funds would be released to provide, along with other funds, $11,500,000 for the common schools; $3,340,000 for capacity operations of the institutions and the $5,050,000 required to pay 93,214 persons entitled to public assistance, and still leave a surplus of $518,058.81.

On the other hand, if the additional payment provided for public assistance is not desired, then there would be a surplus in funds of $3,205,558.81 which may be re-

Grandma, Kids Seek 'Vacation' Contest Money

All Desire Constitution Coupons To Win Fox Film Prizes.

On Monday, your editor asked "How would you like to win $25 in cash toward your vacation this summer?"

Evidently everybody in our neighborhood is enthusiastic over the idea, because our doorbell rings, and it's little Raymond from across the street come over to ask if we're saving our coupons, 'cause his big sister Sally has her vacation in August and she's awfully anxious to have the money.

And then Amy, the 'teener whose steps always seem to be cluttered with gangling boys, but who is dreamily interested in taking a vacation "away" to meet some "southern" man, comes over casually to ask if she might clip our paper.

And then quiet little Mrs. C., who works downtown . . . embarrassedly asks if we would mind if she stopped by each evening to get the coupon. And then, you'll never guess, grandma phoned and asked that we save the coupon for her.

So everybody we know is in on the contest. Guess we'd better plan to spend Friday night here at the office to read letters and count votes. But if everybody in our neighborhood HAS entered the contest, there's still room for you and you and you.

There are three big prizes, $25, $15 and $10. All you have to do is clip the coupon on this page, worth 25 votes, and send in all you can get with a letter of not more than 100 words on the subject, "What I consider a 'heavenly' vacation."

All answers must be sent to The Atlanta Constitution Contest Editor before Friday, July 12, at 6 o'clock. Winners will be announced on the following Sunday. The decision of the judges will be final.

The contest is being held in conjunction with the showing of "All This, and Heaven Too," starring Bette Davis and Charles Boyer, starting at the Fox theater next Friday.

allocated to either of the agencies reduced to the 1934 basis.

Furthermore, if neither the additional payments for public assistance nor the institutions is desired, there would be a surplus of $4,036,756.21, while if the common schools are to be financed on the basis of the past fiscal year without provision for the seven-month operation, in the same manner that public assistance and the institutions are held to the past fiscal year basis, there will be a surplus of $5,899,756.21.

With reference to the state's obligations at the close of the last fiscal year, Arnold explained why there was a $3,910,132.78 school obligation.

Assembly Resolution.

He said the general assembly at its 1939 session passed a resolution, which superseded any previous limitations placed on the school funds, by instructing the educational officials not only to anticipate full payment on appropriation, but in effect to expect an additional appropriation of $1,105,332.78 which was necessary in order to pay for the full seven months school term as set up at that time.

As a result of this resolution, instead of operating within available funds, the school officials incurred obligations of $3,910,132.78 in excess of the available appropriations.

"In all fairness to the common school officials, it is incumbent upon the general assembly to appropriate this $3,910,132.78 to cover the obligations authorized, and also to provide the funds with which to pay the appropriation," Arnold said.

Explaining the Tattall prison obligation, Arnold said the federal government built the prison in 1936, for which the state was obligated to pay $2,413,358.23 over a period of 50 years. The annual payment is $48,028.53. The obligation now has been reduced to $2,209,312.38.

The state hospital at Milledgeville entered into a lease purchase agreement with the hospital authority, whereby it would use the buildings for an annual payment of $140,000 which will go toward retiring a $2,390,000 obligation and $1,655,340 interest.

ATLANTA, GA., JULY 10, 1940.

Georgia's Taxes

State Auditor Zach Arnold has given candidates for governor some grist for their political mills, which, if intelligently and not emotionally discussed, greatly will assist government in Georgia.

Mr. Arnold's report is so prepared as to present some 25 "conditions" which the public and the incoming legislature should study. The report is such that civic organizations over the state immediately should avail themselves of copies and make contacts with their legislative candidates.

If candidates for the legislature and for the governor's office were led publicly to discuss the report and indicate which of the several conditions they believe should be adopted, good government would benefit in no small measure.

The report shows that Georgia collected in the last fiscal year $43,775,316 in taxes. Mr. Arnold estimates in his first condition, which is that the full program of expanded services as voted by the legislature enacting them, that $750,000 more in taxes must be collected to finance the services.

Throughout the remaining 24 conditions he sets out what may be done with curtailment, with limitation of allocations as in 1934; with maintaining some services and eliminating others, and with various other methods of trying to fit the tax money to the state services.

It is a thought-provoking report. It indicates that those candidates promising to carry out the full program of services by eliminating waste and useless employees, had best study the report and make some careful estimates. The people demand that whatever waste there is be eliminated and that any useless employees be dismissed. But it is at once apparent that such eliminations will not even begin to make up the $750,000 required to carry out the full program of services as voted by the legislature.

The report indicates that the incoming governor and legislature courageously must attack the problem. There should be no further juggling and no more evasion.

The program either can or cannot be financed by revision of our tax structures, by savings, and by administration. If it can be done then the legislature must provide the machinery for the program. If it cannot, then old-age pensions, the seven-months school and other provisions now a part of the state's laws, of necessity, must be repealed or revised.

The law which called for additional taxes provided for a seven-months school, old age assistance, social security benefits, free textbooks, expansion of the public health program, and other services. The tax collections were almost $8,000,000 below the sum needed to pay for the state's program.

Taxes arouse emotions. Georgia has had enough of emotional name-calling and needs some thoughtful, patriotic study and action.

The state would benefit from a thorough discussion of the tax predicament based on the cold and exacting figures of the auditor's report.

Those English Motors

There is more than meets the eye, or at least it seems so, in refusals by Ford and now by Packard, to manufacture motors for English airplanes.

Both companies have confused the public by their refusal to make any statement of explanation, contenting themselves with the announcement of refusal. That public reaction would not be good must have been anticipated. There was criticism only because on the surface it appeared as a refusal to participate in aid to England and to our own national preparedness.

There was additional confusion because of the fact that Ford in his Canadian and English plants busily was engaged in manufacturing the engines in question.

Now comes the word from sources confidential that what brought refusals from both companies was the inequitable credit feature of the English contract.

It would have been necessary for each company immediately to spend several millions in plant expansion and tooling. Reportedly the contract would not begin to produce any return whatsoever until a period of six months had elapsed after acceptance of the contract.

Apparently the reason for refusal was the English contract did not appear to be good business. If so, a statement to that effect would have furthered the cause of understanding on the part of the public. Reports have it a more equitable contract would have been accepted by either company.

A Cootieless War?

Most rugged of all the veterans of the first World War was the cootie, a microscopic caricature of one of those tanks that seem to be creating a great share of today's havoc in Europe.

The mere memory of a cootie starts an itch. He was a tireless master of the war of movement, the greatest night fighter of them all. He selected his battlegrounds as carefully as any of history's generals and moved into action with calm persistence. His favorite camouflage was the fuzz of winter underwear and his unswerving policy, like Hitler's, was to wear down the enemy's will power as he moved along, indifferent to profane or righteous criticism.

What has become of the cootie in this war of today?

News dispatches from abroad don't list him even as a neutral. The radio commentators, hard pressed as they are for nightly excitement, make no mention of him.

Has he, fattened to incomparable proportions by his successes in the last war, retired to the lush pastures from which he sprung, thriving there on memories of his glorious past, giving birth to newer generations too soft to adapt themselves to this mechanized warfare of today?

Can it be that a cootie, moved out of those trenches of rich, soft mud of the past, finds a concrete Maginot with hot and cold running water, beautystreets and such, objectionable to the hardy spirit of his race?

Is a cootie, out of the trenches and racing through the skies in 400-mile-an-hour airplanes, weakened by the discovery that he is allergic to height?

Is a cootie actually whipped to gasping surrender by the rattle and the roar and the bumping of an 80-ton tank?

We would like to hear something from, or about, the cootie. After all, he stuck right through that last World War—in fact, it was several months after November 11, 1918, that he seemed to have heard about the armistice. He gave up, grumblingly, to a final barrage of steam as the Americans left for home. He was, unrightfully, ignored at Versailles; he was the outstanding conqueror of them all. He has a lot of old scores to settle in this new war—but, where is he?

After the many years in which we, the light-hearted, have been singing "O'er the Ramparts We Watch," a question suddenly arises, "what ramparts?"

Holstein, Guernsey and Jersey are in Nazi hands, all of which is well in line with the Fuehrer's policy of milking the property.

In this compulsory training for the young, as we understand it, there will be no place for the three P's—proms, polo shirts and papa's car.

The ultimate in will power is as it was defined many years ago: To eat one salted peanut and stop.

Baffling to the new and efficient Nazi management of France must be the native love for fishing where there are no fish.

They say the banana has been known here only 70 years or so, but we wonder. Wasn't the banana pee joke one of the original verses?

THE FLEET AND JAPAN.
(From The Oakland Tribune.)

The mysterious rumors regarding the departure of the United States fleet from Hawaiian waters to the mainland apparently were dissipated yesterday by the definite statement in Honolulu that it would remain at Pearl Harbor for about two weeks and then engage in more maneuvers.

Conflicting and vague reports about the movement of the fleet emanating both from Washington and Hawaii, led to surmises that the United States might be withdrawing from the Orient at a time when Japan is determined to seize certain valuable territories of France and Great Britain. It was hinted that Nazi uprisings and violent agitation in South America had made it necessary for the United States to decrease its lines of defense and concentrate more naval power in continental waters.

It is quite possible that these reports and speculations were inspired by the fact that certain parts of the fleet were detached for use elsewhere. We now have three big cruisers in South American waters and an undetermined number of battleships off the coast of Venezuela.

Having succeeded in cutting off supplies going to China over the French Indo-China railroad, Japan is about ready to march into Hongkong in an effort to force Great Britain to close the Burma road over which large quantities of war materials go to Chungking. This explosive situation, combined with Foreign Minister Arita's pronouncement a Japanese "Monroe Doctrine" for East Asia, makes the value of the American fleet as a deterrent even greater than during the past few months.

Colonel Frank Knox, nominated for the post of secretary of the navy, told a senate committee yesterday that he had reconsidered his views favoring a "strong policy" toward Japanese aggression in the Far East. "We may be forced to choose between the threat in the Atlantic and the threat in the Pacific," he said. "If we cannot wage a successful war against Japan singlehandedly, then we had better not make any threats at all."

This is not definitely in favor of an accord with Japan that would condone her forced seizures of other States' territories, but it is in the nature of "appeasement." It smacks of capitulatory rapprochement.

"Appeasement" has never worked; it is a direct invitation to the aggressor to go the limit. And the continued presence of the fleet in Hawaiian waters is an indication that we have not yet reached the state of moral debility in our Pacific diplomacy.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—In many South American nations German Fifth Column activity is already almost as intense as it was in Norway just before the invasion. Of late it has been actively supplemented by renewed efforts at economic penetration, which take the form of offers from German commercial counselors and other agents to buy huge quantities of South American goods if, as and when the war in Europe ends. Contracts are even being offered on this if, as and when basis. If England is conquered this summer, the War Department frankly expects Hitler to move in this hemisphere before the summer's end.

In the face of this problem, which is both huge and acute, the American policymakers believe that to prevent successful German economic penetration of the hemisphere is the first necessary step. Unfortunately, their plan for doing this has been almost universally misunderstood, while the South American response to it has been equally generally misrepresented. Few matters are of more crucial importance, and a recapitulation of the facts would appear to be in order.

BERLE'S PLAN When the State Department found itself confronted with the possibility of a quick German victory, one of the first fears was of the results to the southward. The products of the United States and those of most South American nations are competitive. Germany would obviously provide a huge market for these South American products we could not take. There would follow first an economic and then a political enslavement of large areas of the hemisphere, and this, in the end, would be extremely threatening to the defensive position of the United States.

Faced with such a prospect, the State Department's thinkers bestirred themselves, and eventually Assistant Secretary Adolf A. Berle Jr. evolved what has been mislabeled the "cartel plan." The plan, which does not call for the formation of any cartel in the accurate meaning of the word, is fairly simple.

At its base is the assumption, already proved reliable, that no South American nation wishes to be enslaved if enslavement can be avoided. Since it is quite clear that economic domination of South America by Germany must prove only the preliminary of a more complete domination, it is also assumed that all South American nations will be glad to join to preserve their economic independence. This joining together, to prevent the big buyer from overwhelming the little sellers, is the essence of the Berle plan. The plan really falls into two parts.

(1) Because of the war and the cutting off of normal markets, large surpluses of many kinds of goods are now piling up in several South American countries. Since there is tremendous pressure to dispose of these goods, and since Germany wants them, they are the primary danger point. The Berle plan calls for purchase of these surpluses by the United States, probably the RFC under new powers to be asked of congress. The initial expense may run up to $500,000,000, but will, of course, be partly compensated for by the eventual sale of the commodities. Whatever the cost, it will certainly be less than the cost of handing South America over to Germany.

(2) Purchases of existing South American surpluses will give the United States time to turn around. The time will be used to arrange for co-operative hemisphere action on a long-term basis. This action may take the form of the establishment of a hemispheric trading corporation which will exchange the products of the Americas for the products of German-controlled Europe. Or it may take the form of the establishment of pools in a number of the more important individual hemisphere products, such as a wheat pool, a meat pool, and so forth. Or it may take the form of continued purchases by this country of South American goods, making Washington the broker of the hemisphere. There are several possibilities. The main point is that, if the South American nations and our own congress consent, action of some sort will be taken to prevent the Germans from using their vast new resources to break down our South American economy after another.

CAUSES FOR ALARM The reception of the Berle plan in South America, so far, has been friendly. The Havana conference has been called to lay the groundwork, and is expected to produce a declaration which will serve as a point of departure for subsequent negotiation. The fact that the Argentine and one or two other South American foreign ministers are staying away from the conference does not alarm the State Department in the least. The real reason is not unwillingness to co-operate, but a desire to stay at home to deal with Fifth Column problems if they arise.

What does alarm the State Department is the possibility that certain powerful special-interest groups in this country will offer short-sighted opposition, or that certain elements in congress will exhibit their usual lighthearted partisanship, or that weakness in our national policy will make the South Americans believe that we are not in earnest about hemisphere defense. This last, the most important point of all, deserves further discussion.

THE PULSE OF THE PUBLIC

The Constitution invites expression of opinion by its readers. This column is open for that purpose. All communications must be signed and all are subject to editing for conservation of space. Brevity makes argument effective and impels attention.

MANY HAVE PROFITED

Editor Constitution: Recognizing that the spirit of the law is being violated during the past week to the full text of Dr. Truett's sermons has been valuable space from the advertising point of view I wish, as one of the Baptist pastors of the city, to thank The Constitution for the consideration shown the meetings of Dr. Truett in publishing his daily messages.

You have thus enabled a much wider circle to read these daily messages. No one can ever get the full force of his sermons who does not look into his dynamic face while he speaks. But the vital messages have been carried by your paper to a large number of people and we are grateful that you have written and I am letting others "hear" the Word as he has preached it.

APPRECIATE SERMONS

Editor Constitution: I want to express my personal appreciation for the interest you manifested and publicity given to Dr. George W. Truett's meetings conducted in Atlanta at Druid Hills Baptist church and City Auditorium. It has given these sermons to so many of our country people.

My mother, who lives down in the rural sections of Alabama, is 75 years of age and talking to me Saturday expressed her appreciation so much for the wonderful work you are doing.

AGAINST THE POLL TAX

Editor Constitution: I have just read Ralph McGill's article deploring the fact that so few people vote in the polls and vote. Mr. McGill is an able writer, and I certainly enjoy and approve most of his editorials. But I am surprised that he doesn't explain just why there are so few voters.

Certain interests believe that the only way to keep the ballot pure is to scrap certain parts of the American Constitution and disqualify the poorer citizens from voting. This is done by the unconstitutional device named the poll tax.

It is as hard for a tenant farmer or cropper to raise a dollar or two for poll tax at times as it would

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

NEW YORK, July 9.—It will be hard to find anywhere in the underworld of the United States a more vicious and dangerous example of ingratitude to the generous nation which opened her arms to the oppressed peoples of the old world than Moses L. Annenberg, who has just been sentenced to three years in a federal prison for failure to pay the income tax on the greatest individual cash income in the country.

Annenberg came to America from East Prussia as a little boy, the son of an immigrant refugee from the persecution and limitation of opportunity which drove millions to the United States. His father became a peddler and junk dealer, and Moe himself, as a boy, sold papers on the corners of the turbulent, uncouth prairie capital, Chicago. He had a talent, carelessly described as genius, for organizing business and became rich in more or less legitimate activities in the circulation and publishing departments of the newspaper industry.

But his character was low, cunning and criminal, and not satisfied with the wealth that poured in from his newspaper activities, he organized a monopoly over the dissemination of horse race results in league with the underworld of crime and politics. This monopoly fed race results to a vast, illegal system of gambling joints in more than 200 cities of the United States and Canada, and these joints corrupted government and courts, worst of all in that Chicago, where he had first sampled freedom of opportunity which he never would have enjoyed in Germany.

His Squeal

Moe Annenberg's greed for money and his cynical ingratitude to the United States were such that he was willing to corrupt the form of government which gave him his chance to become a rich and powerful man. He was so greedy and ungrateful that, having participated in that corruption of the system which endowed him with unaccustomed rights and human dignity, having undermined the stability of that system, he suffered alone, by withholding them, the taxes which he knew he should have paid into the national treasury for the support of that system and its defense against foreign enemies.

It has been argued in his defense that he did not know he was withholding his taxes. His affairs were so large and the interrelations of his companies were so entangled that his business outgrew his bookkeeping.

That, however, is only his squeal. He was shrewd enough to form those corporations which to outwit the underworld in building his monopoly, and the very character of this dirty business of his was such as to prove that he had no feeling of respect or gratitude for the form of government which he had so defiled by day and year after year from his activities. Not merely from the added burdens of taxes which was placed on other Americans but from the very real and perceptible impairment of the democratic system, all Americans suffered from the greedy rascality of this ruthless master-ingenue.

His Worst Offense

His worst offense was one that cannot be charged in an indictment under the American laws. It is a moral offense. His worst offense was the damage to public confidence in the city government and in the efficiency of democratic government which was wrought by the operation of his evil business.

Of the thousands of clients who subscribed to the race news purveyed by his racket only a negligible few legitimate news publications were legal. Generally speaking, his news service existed for and by corruption. Most of his clients were bookmakers or poolrooms operating in violation of the law and by the connivance of corrupt mayors, judges, prosecutors, city councilors and state legislators.

In Chicago, where he first practiced the freedom of opportunity which America gave an oppressed immigrant, Moe's influence was most destructive, for in Chicago the outlaw gangs came to have an influential if not dominant voice in the city government. And in proportion to the rise of their influence so the faith of the people in popular government declined. No big ranting from pulpits or soapbox—not Fritz Kuhn himself of the anti-American Bund—has been a worse enemy to the dignity and wellbeing of the Jews in the United States than Moe Annenberg. He could have been a conspicuous example of decency and gratitude to America, but it just wasn't in him.

'Blitzkrieg' Tires Him.

Air raid precautions in Sydney, Australia, were altogether too cautious for Henry Archer, a boy scout. He acted the part of a badly wounded person and was supposed to wait for the ambulance. After an hour he threw up his job in disgust, leaving this note held down by a stone: "Have died to death and have gone home. Sorry."

ONE OF THE FIRST STEPS

Editor Constitution: Ralph McGill's column re "Mirroring the People," "A Plan for America," "A Thing of Spirit," was excellent. Keep plugging along that line.

One of the first steps in a program of saving America for the Americans is to rid the country of the dishonest, misleading politicians who willfully befuddle the people to stay in office.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

"WHERE THERE IS NO VISION—" Yesterday morning there was a downpour of rain. I came to the office in a taxi. The driver and I talked about the weather and, finally, politics.

He was cynical about politics. He was not registered. He had a what's-the-use attitude about it. He said, "Oh, well, the fellow with the most jack and the machine behind him always wins."

It would be interesting to know if the politicians realize just how cynical people generally have become about politics?

And also if they realize this is a distinct national danger? The Republicans didn't realize it at Philadelphia. Everything they did, before the unwanted nomination of Wilkie, added to the cynicism of the people. It will be most unfortunate if the Democrats at Chicago next week should fail to dissipate some of this cynicism.

We know now that one reason the French fought so badly was not entirely due to lack of equipment or to the failure and disloyalty of some of its officers.

The French soldier had been given poor equipment. But even worse, he had been given nothing for which to fight. For centuries the French soldier has been regarded as the best soldier, or at least one of the best soldiers, the world has ever known. But in the recent defeat the French soldier had no spirit for the war.

His political leaders had given him no spirit for the fighting; no belief in his institutions.

Behind him there was division. Newspapers, subsidized, inflamed against their ally, England. Others attacked France's part in the war. The agents of Germany and Russia were active. The large Communist element passively or actively opposed the war. It is I recall, in Proverbs where there is a chapter which says, "Where there is no vision the people perish." Students have told me it might well be translated, "Where there is no vision the people cast off all restraint."

ORIGIN OF FIFTH COLUMN The phrase, "The Fifth Column," originated in the civil war in Spain. This fact often has been published but there still are inquiries about it.

General Emilio Mola, General Franco's chief military aid, said after the fall of Toledo the Spanish rebels had four columns marching on Madrid and that a fifth column within the city would "rise at the proper time."

Incidentally, Mr. Ernest Hemingway, who has written at least one great novel and some of our best short stories, has filed suit against an English movie company which seeks to title a movie "The Fifth Column Squad." In England it was called "Spies in the Air."

Mr. Hemingway has a play going in New York called "The Fifth Column." It was written during the civil war in Spain and is, I think, the best bit of writing Mr. Hemingway has done since "Farewell to Arms." It wishes no encroachments.

At any rate, the phrase is employed to describe a traitor. In fact, it describes a traitor of the very worst sort. It is one who pretends friendship and works to betray those who have accepted him. In Holland and in France the Fifth Column members often came in as refugees, accepting food and the attention given refugees. They waited their time to betray.

Here of late we have been given to some flippancy about the Fifth Column. It might be well to keep in mind the fact a Fifth Columnist is the worst sort of a traitor and the phrase carries with it, when applied to national defense, all the implications of betrayal and falsehood.

CONFUSION CONFOUNDED

Writing on the subject of the French collapse, Edgar Ansel Mowrer, whose stories have been uniformly excellent, said:

"Members of General Andre Georges Corap's defeated Meuse army have insisted to this correspondent that Communists were active in spreading panic and formed an important part of the 'Fifth Column.' If the communists were pro-Hitler, through love of Stalin, half of the Socialist trade unions were dominated by Trotskyist pacifists. Members of the important School Teachers' Union preached submission in preference to war, since subjugation does not last forever, and 'when you're dead, you're dead.'"

"The majority of the workmen did their duty when the time came, but Communist and Socialist pacifist teaching left definite traces."

We have something of the same sort of condition. Our "Youth League" meets at Geneva and displays a hostile attitude toward national preparedness plans. It attacks a universal service plan for the training of our young men.

John L. Lewis seeks to unite the Townsend planners with any loose-end organized group he can find in an effort to wreck Roosevelt. Leaders of his own union support Roosevelt.

The people themselves must become aroused at the polls. If our political integrity is to be restored and our institutions maintained it must be done with the confidence and aid of the people.

Sailors Don't Fill Their Pockets While Their Ship Is Driving On The Rocks

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

When some disaster like an earthquake leaves a city in ruins, there are vile creatures who prowl among the wreckage in search of loot and pick the pockets of the dead. They are called ghouls, and they are shot without trial when caught at their ghastly gleaming.

Ghoul is a fitting name for the politician who tries to gather loot in times like these—to get a personal or party profit from his country's peril. He will find it a short cut to oblivion.

History records no other phenomenon as strange and fateful as the blindness of politicians in all free lands during the last seven years—perverse and incredible blindness that refused to see approaching doom in spite of abundant and ever-increasing evidence. That blindness seems especially strange in America, where politicians fearful of losing their jobs espouse any queer cause favored by the people back home. It is difficult to find a parallel, except in some tragedy of Greek mythology wherein doomed men were blinded by the gods.

We sneer at Chamberlain, yet even his eyes were opened after Hitler's wanton ravishment of Czechoslovakia, while many of our politicians are still unable to see what is happening.

Their obvious excuse for past negligence is that the people did not demand armament. But they wasted the nation's wealth and credit on social experiments and cement sidewalks, without regard for the future, and there was no public demand for these things. Moreover, thinking people did demand adequate defenses.

For over two years I have been asking people their opinion of preparedness; and all of them, rich and poor, doctor, merchant, clerk, farmer, laborer, men and women alike, without a single exception, have answered in this fashion: "We must keep out of war, but we ought to have the strongest navy and the strongest air fleet in the world."

The people are scared—not cravenly terrified, but wisely anxious. And if you will talk with them, you will find they have only scorn and contempt for politicians who seem to have more interest in party gain than in the nation's safety.

We are in a tight place. And party doesn't matter now. We need the brains and executive ability of able men in both parties. We need men purged of selfishness. And woe to the pip-squeak who tries to play smart politics to benefit his party by further endangering his country.

OFF THE RECORD—By Ed Reed

"I forgot to have the butcher slice the Bologna."

by Dudley Glass

Great White Way.

Newspapers announced a few days ago that Peachtree street was at last equipped with lights all the way out to the city limits. That meant the white-gloved lights on iron posts beside the curb. Or so I assume. The only lights I notice are the red and green traffic signals—which seem to spring up in new places overnight, like hollyhocks—and the glaring headlights of approaching automobiles, which make me cuss. If I spend a year in the inferno for every time a glaring light in my eyes has made me cuss eternally will lose its meaning. It won't be nothin'.

Wonder how many of you remember when Peachtree's "Great White Way" was first lighted, with a civic celebration. It may have embraced Whitehall, too, but I haven't the data at hand.

I know it must have been more than 20 years ago, for I was living in West End then. And "Billy" Walthall, a good neighbor, invited me to join him in the great automobile parade which was to mark the turning on of the electric juice.

The lamps, posts and other equipment, as I remember, were sold to enterprising merchants along the route by even more enterprising salesmen. So only the central and busiest part of town could afford the "White Way." It extended on that great night about as far out as Ellis street—or maybe Cain. To the old governor's mansion and the Masonic Temple.

Bit Overheated.

My principal recollection is of that ride in "Billy" Walthall's car. I didn't own one. I'd invested my future in a phonograph and was going busted on records.

Every automobile in town, I think, joined in that parade. Must have been a couple of hundred of them. They lined up at the northern terminus of the Great White Way and waited for the grand marshal to start 'em off.

The engines were kept running, chugging along. Otherwise, the drivers would have had to get out and crank, with uncertain results. The engines got hot. As time wore on they got hotter. Finally the parade started. Slowly. Cars in low gear.

All down the line radiator caps blew off and geysers of steam and hot water sprayed bystanders on the curb. Drivers called frantically for more water, which was as scarce as oysters in a 15-cent stew.

Red hot cars turned out of line, or were pushed. I think we almost gained Five Points before Billy's steel steed threatened to explode. And both of us had experienced a nice, hot shower bath. Automobile parades, bearing visiting celebrities, move faster now. So fast we sometimes can't distinguish the celebrity from Mayor Bill Harfield or the current governor.

They'd be more impressive, I often think, if we could borrow the leading citizen's big carriage and let the top down and round up four white horses with brass-mounted harness.

Wonder whatever became of Colonel Bob Lowry's famous tally-ho coach on the top deck of which rode the prettiest girls the white-moustached Colonel could pick from the season's crop of debutantes.

Cattle Peril.

Alabama shares with south Georgia and parts of Florida the peril of the "free range" and roaming cattle on the highway. The Mobile Press-Register complains bitterly:

"One man dead and two others so seriously injured that if they recover without being crippled for life they will have only the grace of God to thank is the sum cost in south Alabama during the past week of the indefensible practice of permitting cattle to roam at large in a motorized age. That should cause even those who attempt to argue the waning cause of free range to pause for thought.

"A scrub cow on the hoof can command at best from $20 to $30. The God-given spark of human life cannot be rightfully measured in dollars and cents, but say, for the sake of argument, that the life of a man is worth $50,000. Where in heaven's name is the economic justification for allowing a $20 cow to endanger the life of a man?"

Although repeated efforts have been made in Georgia to amend the cattle laws and require owners to fence in their livestock, all have failed. Each county is a law unto itself and the cattle raisers who enjoy the right to graze their stock on other peoples' land always succeed in protecting their interests.

"Jazz Dancing."

Every now and then somebody sends me a clipping about some odd law, still on the statute books but forgotten and usually "more honored in the breach than in the observance."

This one comes from Savannah, where a city ordinance, passed in 1922 during a phase of municipal virtuosity, says:

"All forms of jazz dancing as well as all forms of dancing to jazz music . . . at public dance halls . . . or at hotels . . . is declared unlawful and are hereby prohibited as being indecent and injurious to the public morals."

The penalty was fixed at not more than $100 fine or 30 days in jail, or both.

No offender has been hauled before the court in a number of years, probably to the relief of the recorder. For no Savannah lawyer or judge has succeeded in determining just what is jazz music or jazz dancing. And the ordinance does not mention "swing."

Britain Called Actual Arbiter Of French Fate

Simpson Says Fascist Regime May Be Temporary for Republic.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.

Associated Press Staff Writer.

The month of July, celebrated alike in France and in the United States as the birth month of representative democracy, will have a new and saddened meaning for many French hearts hereafter.

Like the forest of Compiègne, symbol at once of France's greatest triumph over her ancient foe, Germany, and her crushing defeat at German hands, July goes down in French annals with dual significance.

On July 14, 1789, the Bastille was stormed and the French revolution began. One hundred and fifty-one years later the third republic, to which that revolution led through travail and terror, has succumbed to be replaced by a form of government fashioned in the likeness of the totalitarian regime that conquered France.

There are even stirrings of French royalist ambition to turn the clock back—to restore the throne of deposed Louis XVI and to place upon it his heir of today, the French pretender, the Duke of Guise.

Fantastic Picture.

It is a fantastic picture as another Bastille day, France's equivalent of the American Fourth of July, draws near. Aside from the pavement markers that mark the site of the gloomy pile which long housed French-state prisoners under royal displeasure, the only thing left of the Bastille is its key.

And that key, presented by Lafayette to George Washington as a precious symbol of the birth pangs of a popular government, devoted to liberty, equality and fraternity, hangs still at Mount Vernon.

For generations it has rested there, under the gaze of millions of Americans who have come to honor Washington and the ideals for which he fought. And for a double decade, too, those patriotic pilgrims have turned from Mount Vernon to that other Virginia national shrine at Arlington cemetery close by. It is the tomb of the Unknown American Soldier who died in France that "government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

Other Circumstances.

Yet there are circumstances still to be reckoned with by France's new pro-consul, Marshal Petain, and by Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy, now applauding the course of beaten France toward the ideological orbit of her victorious foes. The ultimate destiny of France is inseparably linked with that of Britain.

Unless England and the British Empire fall also before the armed might of France's conquerors, it cannot be said that the extinguishment of popular government in France is anything more than temporary.

Frenchmen mourning the fate of the third republic take note of that. The Battle of Britain is still to be fought out. Until its outcome is known, they can hope that the present government of that part of France unoccupied by invading armies is but an interim government like others, including the Napoleonic era.

James Houghteling Quits As Chief of Immigration

WASHINGTON, July 9.—(AP)—James L. Houghteling said today that he had resigned as commissioner of immigration and naturalization, effective July 31.

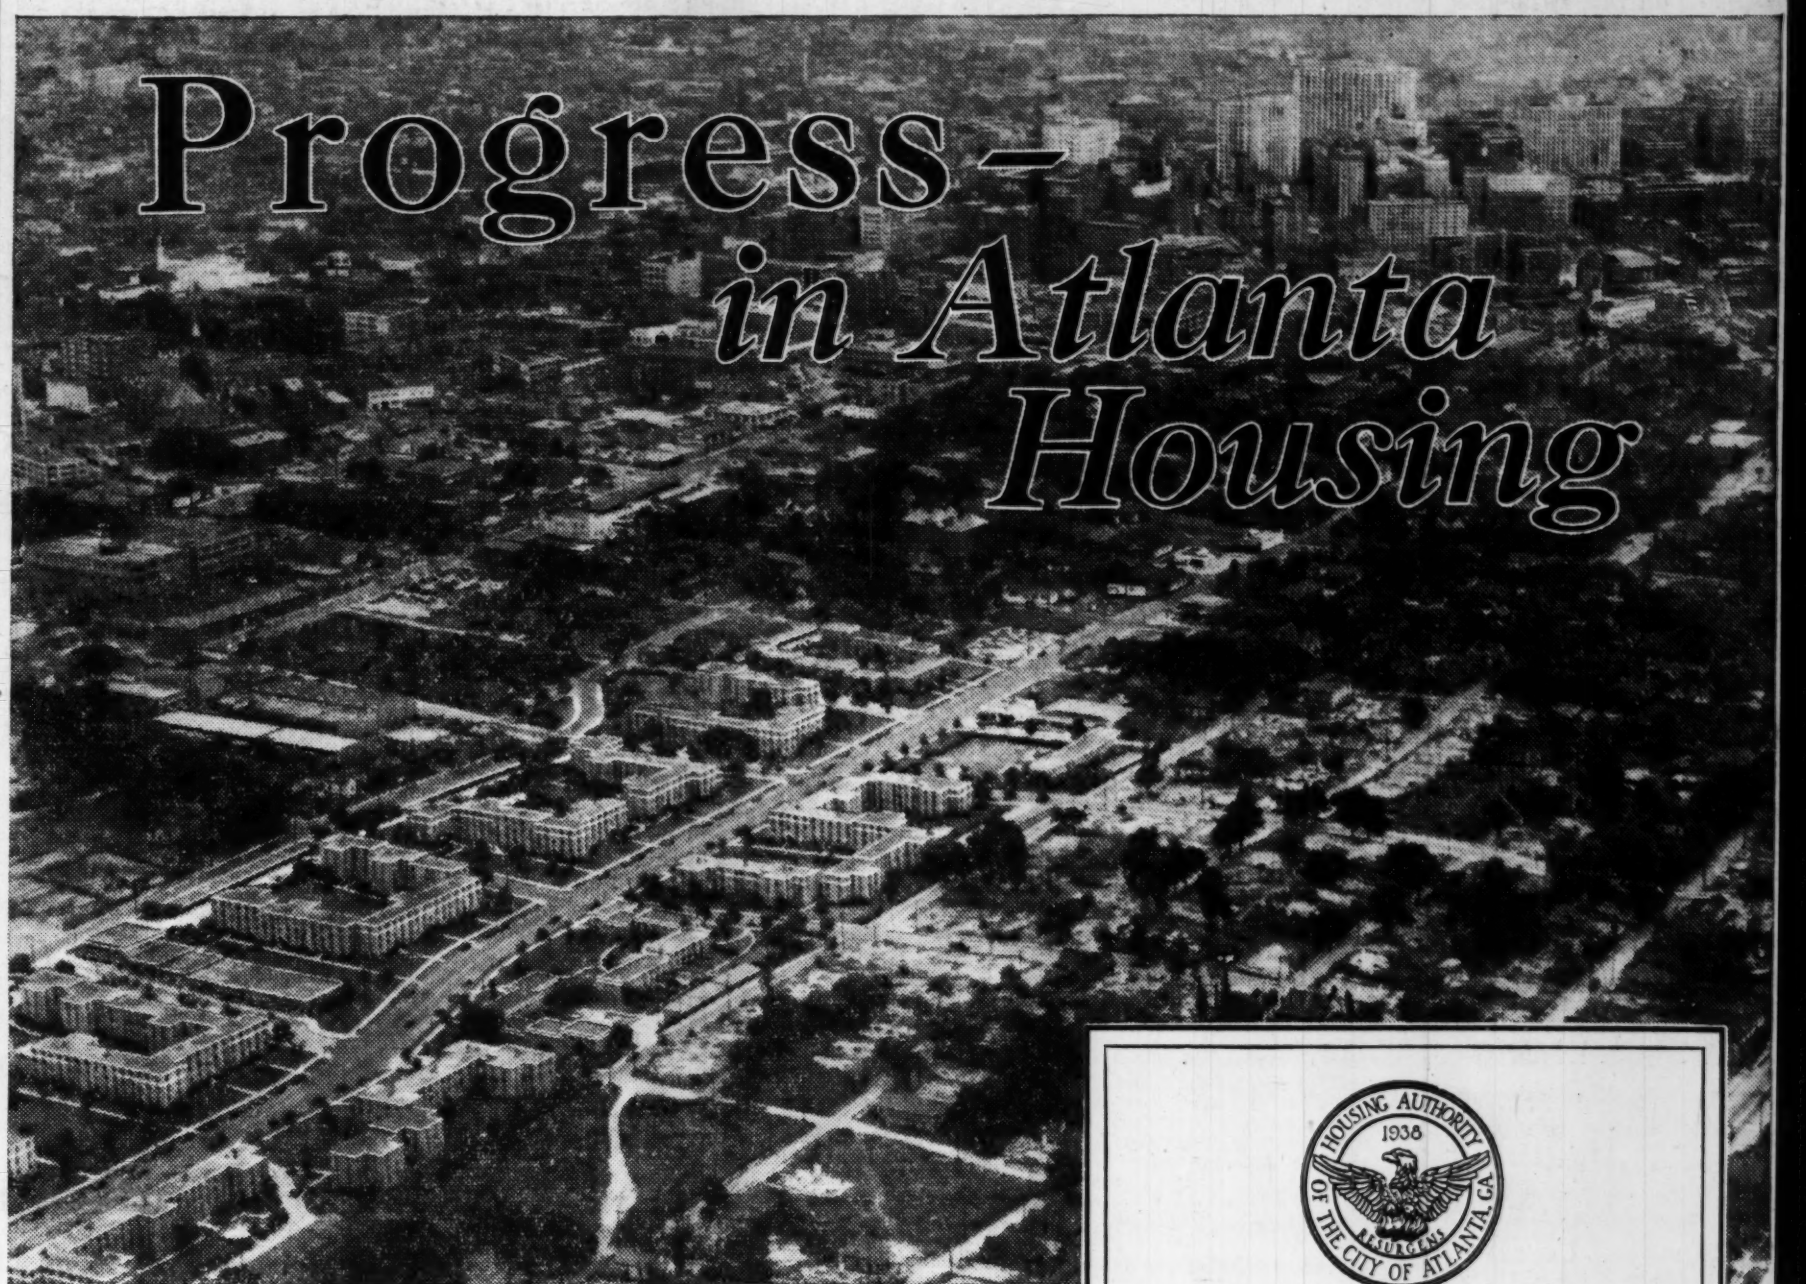

Houghteling, for many years a

Chicago newspaper executive, was appointed commissioner by President Roosevelt in August, 1937. He said that he was leaving to take a rest, but that he expected to return in the early fall to work elsewhere in the government.

The immigration service was transferred from the Labor De-

Airview showing completed Techwood Project and area prepared for Clark Howell Homes Project now under construction.

Atlanta is famed all over the nation for her lovely homes and magnificent residential districts. And now notable progress is being made in the improvement of the districts that aren't heard of so often. Over 4,800 of the substandard dwellings in the city have already been torn down or will be torn down soon. To replace them, attractive modern buildings are being erected by the Housing Authority of Atlanta. The Techwood and University projects, completed by the P. W. A., have been taken over by the Authority and now six other projects are under way, in as many sections of the city.

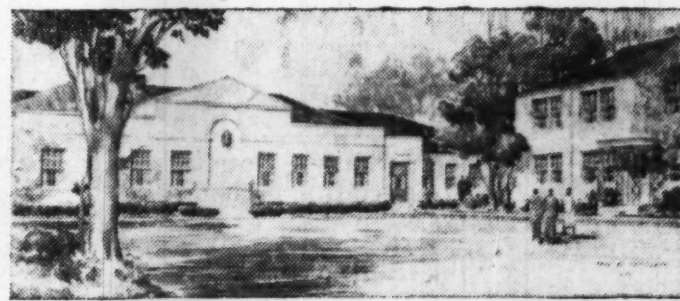

When these six projects are completed, about 5,000 families—almost 20,000 people—will know the joy of homes that are properly built, adequately equipped and healthfully maintained. Rents will be as low as $10.00 per month for a 2½ room unit, including all utilities and a gas stove and electric refrigerator. Many of the buildings demolished had running water only on the back porch! Only low-income families—families to whom such homes are often sheer luxuries—are eligible to rent these modern units.

To her remarkable progress in industry and business, Atlanta now adds notable progress in the field of better housing . . . directly affecting many thousands of people and indirectly affecting every Atlanta resident.

This constant growth of Atlanta—in so many fields—is soundly reflected in the progress and expansion of the Fulton National Bank. Now, wherever you live in Atlanta, you will find a Fulton office nearby. Two conveniently located uptown offices and three neighborhood offices are all fully equipped to serve you on any banking need. Drop by our nearest office for a discussion of your requirements.

Scott Candler Raps Atlanta On Water Plan

Says City Fears Comparison of Rates, Charges Obstructionism.

"Atlanta is trying to block a proposed extension of the DeKalb county water system because it fears a comparison of rates," DeKalb Commissioner Scott Candler charged yesterday as he prepared to leave for Washington for a final conference with WPA officials on an $800,000 federal grant.

Candler further accused Atlanta officials, without naming them, of fearing the two-dollar rate which DeKalb's system will carry. The Atlanta system carries a $3.10 rate per 5,000 gallons.

Mayor Cles Polley, meanwhile, Mayor Hartsfield and Waterworks Manager Zode Smith, of Atlanta, pointed out that WPA will not approve a municipi-pal project where there is a question of competition. Three weeks ago Mayor Hartsfield sent an official protest to Washington, objecting to the DeKalb water project. Smith declared:

"We have no desire to block any water works system proposed by DeKalb county, but have only cited to the works progress administrator that provision of the law which prohibits the granting of federal funds for competitive enterprises.

"The people of Atlanta have invested millions in taxes in the Atlanta water works, and a great deal of their tax money has been spent to extend mains into the outlying areas. Also their tax money has been invested in pumping stations and filter plants in order to be able to serve these outlying areas.

20-Year Service.

"Mr. Candler's plan contemplates competing with the Atlanta water works in the Brookhaven section, and the Emory, Druid Hills section, lying outside of the city limits of Atlanta. These areas have been supplied with water from Atlanta for more than 20 years, and it was the existence of the Atlanta water works, and our willingness to serve them, that made possible the development of these areas.

"Anything which hinders the growth and development of the Atlanta water works in the outside area—would have the tendency of increasing the burden on the users inside of the city, who have already devoted large sums of their taxes to make it possible for the outside citizens to get their service.

"As to comparison of rates, in the suburban areas, if the federal government had furnished the funds for building the Atlanta waterworks, we might furnish even lower rates than Mr. Candler proposes."

Commissioner Candler, however, said: "They do not fear competition; they fear comparison. Our system, if it is approved, will serve only DeKalb county and never enter Fulton. But we will have the lower rate."

Calling any proposal to set up a metropolitan system "a blind to block DeKalb," Candler also said "there is considerable difference between a metropolitan water system and an Atlanta water system attempting to serve the metropolitan area."

Difference on Rates.

He described the main difference as one of rates and said that under the city arrangement Atlanta would fix the rates and "the burden would be carried by those outside the municipal limits."

The big battle rages over Druid Hills, outside the city of Atlanta limits and in DeKalb county. Now served by the city system, it would be connected with the new DeKalb system if the WPA project goes through.

Atlanta itself is considering a two-million-dollar extension program and recently added Hapeville to its list of customers.

PLANE BUILDER—Robert W. Sargent was principal speaker at the Atlanta Exchange Club's weekly meeting yesterday. Sargent, winner of the Exchange Club's prize in the southeastern eliminations, placed eighth in his class in the national meet at Chicago July 1-6, in which 15,000 competed.

Exchange Club Hears Model Plane Builder

Robert Sargent Explains Construction, Flying of Tiny Ships.

Robert W. Sargent, model airplane enthusiast, was the principal speaker yesterday at the weekly meeting of the Atlanta Exchange Club.

Sargent, who won the southeastern eliminations here and in Macon, and who was awarded the Atlanta Exchange Club's prize of expense money to the national meet, described the intricate job of constructing and flying the tiny ships in competition. He placed eighth in the national meet, his first competitive entry. More than 15,000 competed.

Sargent's plane was entered in the division for planes with a wing spread of 7 to 8 feet.

Sargent, who is an active member of the Atlanta Aero Engineers, organization of model plane enthusiasts, "It is my opinion that undoubtedly model plane flying has contributed greatly to the advancement of aviation in this country," Sargent said.

Martin Named Manager for Willkie Dinner

Also Chosen as New Chairman of G.O.P. National Committee.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie today entrusted the direction of his Republican presidential campaign to a 55-year-old New England bachelor—Representative Joseph W. Martin Jr., of Massachusetts—and then went winging away by special plane for a "long sleep" in the Colorado mountains.

Arriving in Chicago, Willkie asserted that "the Democrats evidently are worried when they resort to these things."

He referred to the announcement in Washington by Chairman Gillette, Democrat, of Iowa, that "several requests" had been received by the senate campaign expenditures committee for an investigation of "the alleged high pressure" telegram "in behalf" of Willkie during the Republican national convention.

The nominee described Gillette's statement as "Democratic propaganda," and added: "As far as I am concerned, he can investigate forever."

Martin, house minority leader and North Attleboro (Mass.) publisher, was chosen as the new chairman of the Republican national committee and campaign manager by a unanimous vote of the national committee subcommittee on Willkie's personal recommendation.

John D. M. Hamilton, present chairman, who managed the 1936 presidential drive for Alf M. Landon, a fellow Kansan, was named executive director of the national committee.

Governor Harold E. Stassen, of Minnesota, keynote and Willkie's first manager at the Republican convention, was named chairman of a large campaign advisory committee.

Atlanta-Fulton Trades School To Be Planned

Ed S. Cook, Dr. Sutton Designated as Mapping Committee.

Ed S. Cook, president of the Atlanta board of education, and Dr. Willis A. Sutton, city school superintendent, yesterday were designated as a special committee from the Atlanta board of education to work out a plan for establishment of a vocational and trades training school jointly with Fulton county.

Cook presented the matter to the city board at its regular meeting yesterday, and at the same time read a letter from Mrs. Leonard Haas, secretary of the local government commission, urging the joint project.

A resolution passed by the Fulton county board of education, promising co-operation in the undertaking, also was before the board.

Under the plan, the city and county would pool their resources and attempt to obtain federal funds to construct and operate a giant school designed to better fit graduates of the two school systems for taking their places in affairs of the community after completing their educational courses.

Roosevelt May Remain Silent On 3d Term Until Convention

Every One Wants to Read Last Chapter First, Farley Says.

CHICAGO, July 9.—(AP)—James A. Farley indicated today that President Roosevelt might withhold his answer to the third term question until the Democratic national convention is in progress next week.

Farley, chairman of the party's national committee, learned that the chief executive had in mind to announce his decision at a press conference last Sunday in Hyde Park, N. Y., but still declined to reveal it. But he did hint that Mr. Roosevelt might remain silent until the conclave was under way when he stated at a press conference:

"I wasn't asked to keep it secret, but both the President and I thought it best to keep confidential what we said to each other. It seems to me that everyone wants to read the last chapter of the book. We're going to have a convention here and I hope it will be an interesting one."

Developments only increased speculation among early arrivals for the quadrennial meeting, opening next Monday in the Chicago stadium. Figuring in the discussions was Farley's own role. Asked whether his name would be placed in nomination, he replied:

"My position remains unchanged."

It was recalled that he had asserted briefly that his name would be presented to the delegates.

While uncertainty prevailed among the presidential handicappers, the major events on the early part of the program were arranged for Monday.

That Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, would deliver the keynote address on Monday night and that Senator Alben Barkley, of Kentucky, the permanent chairman, would speak on Tuesday night.

Hatch Measure Reaches House Floor at Last

Democrats Dispute on Result of Political Activities Ban.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—(AP)—The controversial Hatch bill finally came to the floor of the house today with Democrats disputing whether its ban on political activities by state employees drawing federal pay would abate coercion or foster it.

"It will turn over to the ring politicians in America not only the control of elections, not only the control over who shall vote, but how," declared Representative Hobbs, Democrat, Alabama.

But Representative Dempsey, Democrat, New Mexico, house sponsor of the measure, noting that President Roosevelt, senate leaders, many newspapers and others approved, replied:

"This bill is to free these employees. You're giving rights to people in this bill. I don't know one federal employee who'd give up the protection of the Hatch act and go back to the old chaotic conditions."

As the debate began, Representative Rankin, Democrat, Mississippi, a frequent critic of Wendell L. Willkie, Republican presidential nominee, suggested an amendment to keep hirings of public utilities from going out and making speeches.

Rural 'Misery' Shows Decline, Leader States

Health-Consciousness in South, Dr. Douglas Says Here.

A marked decline in the south-east of rural "misery" due to spread of health education in the last decade was noted yesterday by Dr. Gilbert F. Douglas, of Birmingham, Ala., council chairman of the Chattahoochee Valley Medical Association, as the association opened a three-day session at the Henry Grady hotel.

"The misery" was quite a general term among our rural people for nearly anything that was wrong with them physically," Dr. Douglas said, "but that is rapidly disappearing. There is a new 'health-consciousness'."

Hookworm conditions, once widespread in this section, have been practically eliminated. Dr. Douglas said, and pellagra, syphilis, pneumonia, cancer and tuberculosis are receding before the use of traveling clinics, expanded medical care and attention to rural sanitation.

Dr. Hugh Wood, of Atlanta, cautioned against use of the drug as a "substitute for medical care." He said pneumonia appeared more likely to recur with a patient treated with sulfa-pyridine and warned of "apparent cures" that caused the patient to rise from bed too soon. He emphasized his discussion was not intended to detract from the efficiency of the drug.

For Atlanta doctors delivered papers last night. They were Dr. E. Van Buren, Dr. Albert A. Rayle and Dr. Paul Elkin, who spoke on gall bladder diagnosis, and Dr. Phillip H. Nippert, also of Atlanta, who spoke on cancer and its treatment.

Firm To Make Carver Food's Products Here

Scientist's Discoveries, Inventions To Be Put on Sale.

A charter for an Atlanta company to manufacture and distribute products discovered and invented by Dr. George Washington Carver, noted Negro scientist at Tuskegee University, was granted yesterday in Fulton superior court.

The products, such as new foods, drug preparations, paints, stains, dyes, oils, cosmetics and fertilizers, were discovered by Dr. Carver while working at the Negro institution in Alabama. Many of the products come from such ordinary plants as the peanut.

Named as incorporators were Dan Y. Sage Jr., William J. Crum and J. B. Burris, of Atlanta. The corporation is capitalized at $150,000.

Majority for Military Training Despite Youth Congress Attack

Most Young Men Favor One-Year Service; Army Leads Navy and Air Corps in Popularity.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

PRINCETON, N. J., July 9.—Does the resolution adopted by the American Youth Congress condemning conscription represent the typical attitude of American young men?

The congress, besides opposing compulsory military training, unanimously adopted a report by its national chairman criticizing the defense program as designed to "Hitlerize" the country.

National surveys by the American Institute of Public Opinion indicate, however, that opposition to conscription does not represent the typical attitude of the young men of America. While there are divisions of opinion, nevertheless a small majority of those aged 21 through 25 are in favor of compulsory military training for one year for all able-bodied young men.

The Gallup Poll

That issue was put to the country in a survey as follows:

"Do you think every able-bodied young man 20 years old should be made to serve in the army or the navy for one year?"

Those persons in the sample ages 21 through 25 voted as follows:

Yes	52%	No	48%
This compares with a vote of 64 per cent for conscription among all voters throughout the country.

In a companion survey, the Institute sought to find what branch of the fighting forces American men of military age—21 to 46—would prefer to serve in if they had to fight. Several recruiting offices report that the navy and airforce seem to appeal to young volunteer recruits as more adventurous and glamorous than the regular army. But what would be the choice if all men of military age, and not merely young volunteers out to see the world, were questioned?

The Institute asked a cross-section of men aged 21 to 46:

"If the United States were attacked by some foreign country, which branch of the armed forces would you prefer to serve in?"

Only about one in every ten (11 per cent) expressed no choice. The rest divided as follows:

Would prefer army	44%	Would prefer airforce	29%
Would prefer navy	24	Others	3

The reason why the army is preferred is clearly shown in the explanations given by voters for their choice. Most typical of the majority is the statement of a New York businessman who served in the army in 1917-18.

"I'd join the army. It's closer to normal conditions of living than any other branch. I don't want to be up in the air, or out at sea. I want to be on the ground."

Another voter, a farmer in Magnolia, Miss., expressed it this way: "The army's the place for me—you can't drown and you don't have to bail out in parachutes."

Men who have a preference for the navy point to the fact that it means a chance to travel, that it involves less physical hardship than the army, and that it is more colorful and glamorous than packing a rifle and marching along dusty roads.

Officer Denied Still More Rain New Trial by Is Predicted for Appeals Court Atlanta Today

F. J. Aycock's Bribery
Conviction Here Is Upheld.

F. J. Aycock, Atlanta policeman convicted of bribery, was denied a new trial in a decision handed down yesterday by the Georgia court of appeals.

Indicted jointly with another policeman, Aycock was charged with receiving $25 from each of two persons. He was sentenced to serve 12 months in the penitentiary on each count.

In upholding the Fulton county superior court in denying a new trial, the court pointed out that its jurisdiction was restricted to the correction of errors in law and equity and added:

"The whole question of the credibility of witnesses is wisely left to the jury under any and all circumstances, and, though Ananias and Sapphira spoke again, the law would not strike them dead, but would leave their testimony to be weighed and accepted or rejected by the jury."

The court also upheld the Fulton superior court in denying a new trial to Frank G. Coon, who was found guilty on four counts charging robbery by force and intimidation.

R. R. Davis and J. A. Bailey, two other city policemen convicted of taking bribes in the same investigation, were paroled last April 23, records in Fulton superior court showed. They were paroled by Governor Rivers shortly after their convictions were upheld by the higher court.

G. B. Scoggins, another convicted policeman, was granted a 30-day respite on May 16, 1940, by order of Downing Musgrove, then executive secretary to Governor Rivers. This respite was to have expired June 16. The Fulton superior court has received no further word from the capitol on Scoggins' case, it was said. He is free on bond.

PHILADELPHIA, July 9.—(AP)—Grace Moore, operatic and motion picture star, trilled a few notes to a reporter over telephone wires from her Faraway Farms, near Newton, Conn., today to squelch reports she was a patient in Temple University hospital for treatment of a throat ailment.

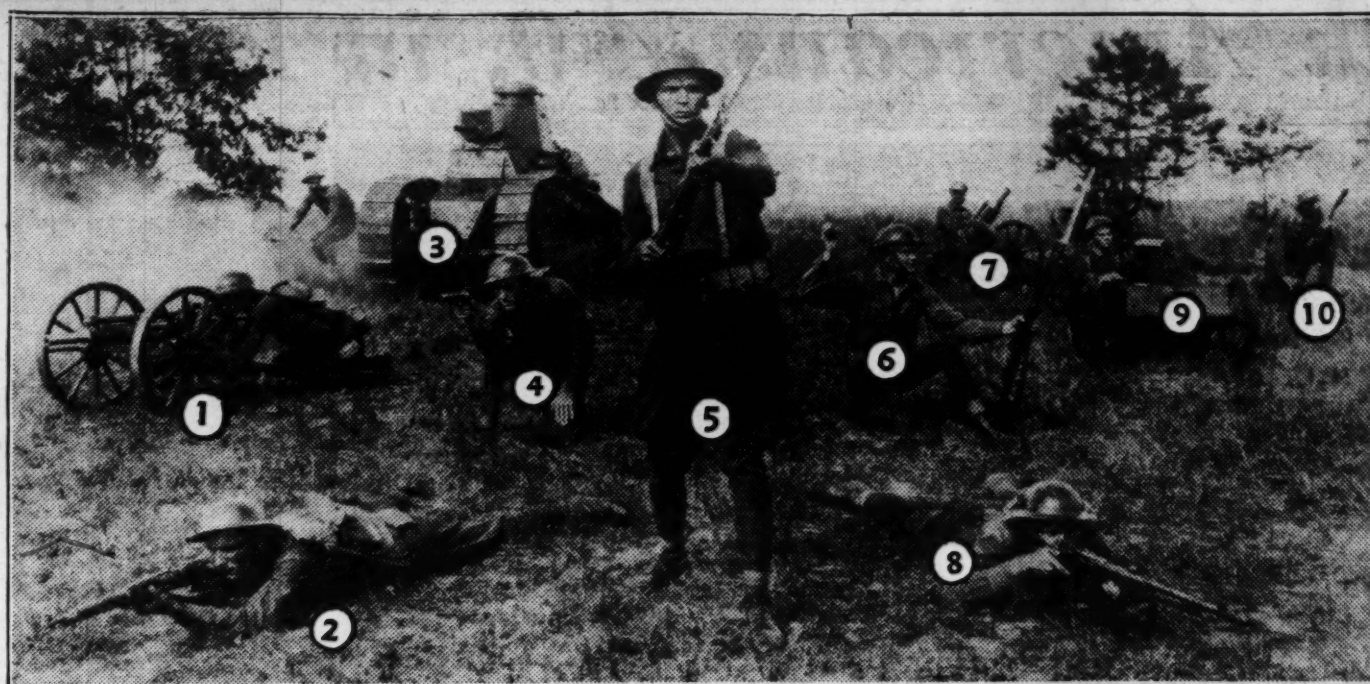

She did enter the hospital some time ago for one day "just to shake off a bad cold," she said, but her throat is "full of health now."

Mother of Three, Missing, Is Sought

Mrs. Lillian Mae Greenwood, 25-year-old Atlanta mother of three children, was being sought by city police yesterday. She has been missing since Saturday from her home at 363 1-2 Memorial drive, S. E., police reported.

Detectives C. L. Taylor and J. M. Austin said the woman left several letters which threatened suicide. They said she had been out of work for several weeks.

The letters were addressed to persons in Trion, Ga., and Sulphur Springs, Fla., and to her mother, Mrs. Willie Bayler, of 348 1-2 Memorial drive, S. E.

WEAPONS FOR WAR ON LAND—A national Gallup poll shows that if this country is attacked, more men would want to get into the army than into the navy or air forces. This photo shows what weapons a soldier is

2 Asiatic Officials Study Health Here

Far away India and Ceylon will follow Georgia's plan of attack on malaria and hookworm, the State Department of Health announced yesterday following a visit here of two health officials from those regions.

The two officials, Dr. Diganaly

Subbarao, of Madras, India, and K. Subramaniam, assistant sanitary engineer to the government of Ceylon, conferred with Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, Georgia health director, and other officials on methods employed by this state to combat these diseases. They will spend a month in this state studying the program.

The two visitors recently completed public health courses at the Harvard School of Public Health.

Whisky Suspects Released On Bail

Lowry W. Latham, alias Joe Latham, and William E. Hunter were released on bails of $300 and $200 respectively yesterday on charges of violation of the liquor law.

Latham and Hunter were arrested near Villa Rica in Pauling county Sunday night by State Troopers J. O. Goodwin and J. T. Barton, of Villa Rica.

Fifty-five gallons of non-tax paid whisky was seized in 11 sacks in the rear of the automobile, which Latham was driving, police said.

Released Prisoner Arrested as Alien

Adelard Bienvenu was released from the federal penitentiary here Sunday and breathed the air of free men for a scant few seconds before a United States marshal arrested him on charges of illegally entering the United States from Canada. Bienvenu had served 18 months for forgery.

He was arraigned before United States Commissioner David J. Meyerhardt yesterday on a New York indictment returned in September, 1939. His bond was set at $1,000, and he was lodged in Fulton county jail to await removal to Albany, N. Y., for trial. He previously had been arrested and deported three times on the same charge.

Many Stings Runs Second To Challedon

'39 Turf Champ Comes Back To Win After Long Layoff.

BOSTON, July 9.—(AP)—W. L. Brann's Challedon, the 1939 champion of the turf, resumed his racing career today after a seven-month rest and scored a decisive triumph over the Lemar Stock Farm's Many Stings in the two-horse $1,500 Corinthian event at Suffolk Downs.

This race was arranged to provide Challedon with a much-needed "tightener" for next week's $50,000 Massachusetts Handicap and the Brann star surprised the crowd of 14,000 by winning easily by two and a half lengths.

Although held under firm restraint by Jockey George Woolf, Challedon turned the mile and a sixteenth in 1:45 1-5, only a second over the track record, while carrying 126 pounds.

Challedon has been away since last fall's Pimlico special, but his performance was so convincing to his trainer, Lou Shafer, that he said he would not start the colt again until he is called upon to carry the top weight of 130 pounds against a brilliant field in this track's outstanding event on July 17.

Had Woolf ridden him out, it is likely Challedon would have won by 10 lengths and shattered the track record. Many Stings, under the whip all through the home stretch, was unable to challenge at any stage of the race, on which there was no wagering.

Claxton Defeats Prison Club, 5-3

REIDSVILLE, Ga., July 9.—Aided by extra base hits, the Claxton All-Stars defeated the G. S. P. Pirates, 5-3. McBride and Stevens pirated homers for Claxton. Johnson, Claxton twirler, scattered five hits and was given excellent support. Kingston started for the prison and was relieved in the fifth by McGahee, who pitched shut-out ball.

ROSAR MARRIES.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 9.—(AP)—Warren (Buddy) Rosar, 25, catcher for the New York Yankees' baseball team, and Miss Ruth Theresa Boyle, 20, both of Buffalo, were married today in Holy Name of Jesus Catholic church.

Atlanta to Win It might not be the best policy to change horses in midstream, but sometimes it is the better part of wisdom to switch on baseball teams after half of the pennant fight has been waged. Hence, with no thought except that they're the better team, I hereby jump on the handwagon with those Atlanta Crackers and leave Larry Gilbert's Nashville Vols to their own designs.

And I have a fair idea what those designs might be before the season ends. First division is a plausible thought. What's the matter with the Vols?

Well, the Crackers are pressing them, for one thing.

But most important of all is the fact that the pitching staff isn't what it used to be. The Vols need pitching. They could use two mound winners.

They're moaning, too, about first base. Rocco did them a great deal of good for more than two months of the campaign but he isn't much help now. Another first baseman is being sought.

Arnold Moser is a fine hitter in Sulphur Dell, but on the road he's just a big out.

There's plenty wrong with the Vols. They have had the pressure on them from the start of the season and it's beginning to show.

Why jump on the Cracker bandwagon? Well, for one thing, the Crackers are determined to overhaul the Vols and win the pennant. And they have much in their favor.

I think one more dependable pitcher would win the pennant for the Crackers.

Nashville will be furnished plenty of competition by Memphis and Chattanooga, among other teams.

The Crackers are in an ideal position. They are in quick-striking distance of the lead now and are absolutely devoid of pressure.

They might be pretty hard to dislodge once they climb to the top. It will be recalled that they started out as a bad last. And in two and a half months they're almost at the top of the heap. You can't beat that for persistent climbing.

Heated Rivalry When Atlanta and Nashville meet for the rest of the season—they open a series Wednesday night—heated rivalry may flare into something significant.

I have never seen a more childish stunt than the one pulled by Greek George in the all-star game. With Emil Mailho on third and two men out in the first inning, George took a few steps up the base path and deliberately threw at the Cracker right fielder.

Ki Ki Cuyler, Chattanooga manager, piloting the All-Stars, anticipated the play. Mailho dodged the ball and then trotted home with the first run. Third Baseman Bob Boken wasn't even near the bag.

The Greek's great play put the Vols in the hole and they never got in the ball game, except briefly.

Southern league ball players will tell you that George has been getting away with "murder" all season. But it's a long lane that has no turning.

Sometime ago it was written here that it might be a case

McNeill Gains Quarter-Finals In N. Y. Meet

Topseeded Player Conquers Pero; Guernsey Also Advances.

NEW YORK, July 9.—(AP)—Don McNeill, Oklahoma City, topseeded in the New York state clay court tennis championships, and Vincent Paul, of Brooklyn, who has been wrecking the lower bracket, advanced to the quarter-final round today.

McNeill, national clay court finalist, defeated George Pero, of Miami, 7-5, 6-4, while Paul ousted George Littleton-Rogers, of Dublin, 3-6, 8-6, 6-1.

McNeill allowed Pero to take a 5-2 advantage in the first set, and then settled down to capture the next five games. Pero was out in front again in the second session, 3-0, but McNeill cooled him off once more.

Defending Champion Frank Guernsey, of Orlando, Fla., rated third, went into the fourth round with a default, followed by a win over Gus Ganzenmuller, of New York, 6-0, 6-2.

Joe Fishbach, of New York; Bill Umstaedter, of Louisiana State University and Milburn, N. J., and Bill Canning, of Berkeley, Cal., also reached the fourth round. Fishbach defeated Louis Brownstein, of San Diego, Cal., 6-3, 7-5; Canning turned back Don Hawley, of Orange, N. J., 6-0, 6-1, and Umstaedter won from Melvin Schwartzman, of Tulane University, 6-3, 3-6, 9-7.

Eddie Vandergrift Gets Benefit Tilt

GADSDEN, Ala., July 9.—(AP)—Eddie Vandergrift, Pensacola infielder who was injured June 30 when struck by a pitched ball, was reported to be improving at a Gadsden hospital today. Hospital attaches said the second-sacker, who suffered a severe fracture of the skull and later underwent an operation for removal of a blood clot from the brain, appeared to be improving steadily.

The Gadsden Pilots will play a benefit game with the Goodyear semipro team July 15 with all gross proceeds going to the injured player.

City Net Meet Delayed Again

Rained out for the second consecutive day at the Northside tennis court, the first rounds of the city tournament were again postponed yesterday.

F. V. Crawford announced that the pairing schedule will remain unchanged, and, unless again interrupted by the weather, the matches will be resumed today.

National Blanks American, 4-0, For First All-Star Shutout

Max West's 3-Run Homer in First Settles Issue; Luke Appling Gets 2 of Junior Loop's 3 Safeties.

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, ST. LOUIS, June 9.—(AP)—The National League humiliated the aces of the American League with the first shutout in the eight-year history of the All-Star game today, 4 to 0, West, of the Boston Bees.

A sweltering crowd of 32,373, slightly less than the capacity of the park, thrilled at the throwing of five National League hurlers as they stifled the ballyhooed batting of the Americans.

The only blows given up by Paul Derringer, Bucky Walters and company were two hits to Luke Appling, of the Chicago White Sox, and one to Pitcher Buck Newsom, of the Detroit Tigers.

The National Leaguers fielded faultlessly and collected seven safeties, four of them in a surprising outburst off the New York Yankees' Red Ruffing in the first inning.

NEVER IN DOUBT. The embittered senior circuit stars, victors in only two of the seven previous All-Star tussles, never gave their foes a chance.

Arky Vaughan, of the Pittsburgh Pirates, a goat in the beating the National League took last summer, led off the assault on Ruffing with a scratch single over Joe Gordon's head. Billy Herman, of the Chicago Cubs, who had a perfect day at the plate with three hits, put on his favorite play, the hit-and-run, and singled Vaughan to third. Then West lofted a 360-foot four-bagger into the right field pavilion.

West, ironically, was hurt in the first half of the next inning to continue the All-Star struggle's string of casualties. He crashed into the right field wall in a desperate leap for a liner by Appling and bruised his left hip, apparently not seriously.

After that first inning flurry the game settled down to a tight rope act and the only other run was scored in the eighth inning, with Bobby Feller, of Cleveland, on the mound.

SCORE ON FELLER. He walked Mel Ott, of the New York Giants, on four straight balls and after Frank McCormick, of Cincinnati, had sacrificed the runner to second, Catcher Hank Danning, of the New York Giants, the National League's leading hitter, drove him home with a sharp single to right field.

The only error of the game occurred on this play as Catcher Rollie Hemley, of the Indians, let Lou Finney's throw roll through him and Danning got to second, but no damage was caused.

Both Manager Bill McKechnie, of the Nationals, and Joe Cronin, of the Americans, captured the spirit of the All-Star struggle as a show and 36 players at 10 into the game, 22 for the National League.

Derringer, who started on the mound for the senior circuit, worked two innings and was the winning pitcher. He fanned three batters and gave up one hit, Appling's double when West was hurt.

McKechnie kept his pitchers going at top speed in short tricks. He sent Walters to the mound at the start of the third and the National League's most valuable player pitched hitless ball for two

Bill Gillespie Knocks at Top Of Net World

Atlanta Boy and Kovacs Loom as Threat to Ranking Stars.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON JR.

NEW YORK, July 9.—(AP)—Two tall young fellows who would like to see their names opposite that 1 in the national tennis rankings, and who stand better than good chances, are taking different roads toward the same objective.

The two are Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Cal., who already has won considerable national recognition, and Billy Gillespie, of Atlanta and the University of Miami.

Kovacs was ranked tenth nationally two years ago, but he suffered from a lame arm last season, played very little and didn't earn a national ranking. He made his first big 1940 bid last week in the Nassau Country Club invitation grass court tourney and won a trophy that has been held by such illustrious figures as Bill Tilden and Bobby Riggs. Before that he had played in the east-west matches at Sewickley, Pa., and taken a couple of drubblings.

He's following the turf court trail, playing this week in the gold racquet tourney at North Conway, New Hampshire.

TREMEBOUS HITTER.

Last week the fans were comparing Kovacs to Tilden and Don Budge. He resembles them in at least one respect. He's tall and lanky and can hit the ball with devastating force, especially off the backhand. He beat two first-tent players, Gil Hunt and Elwood Cooke, and a former Davis Cup player, Joe Hunt, in the Nassau tourney.

Cooke's comment after watching Frank's cross-court backhand shots whizz by him in the final was, "I knew all about that shot; I was ready for it—but what can you do about it?"

The Californian's great faults are his unsteadiness and lack of a well-rounded game. He's inclined to get his feet mixed up and his shots tangled when he meets someone who can handle his power.

Gillespie is taking a more modest route by way of the clay courts. He got off in front in the New York state championship and was the first to reach the round of 16. Billy used to play for Scarborough school near here and usually lost to Marvin Kantowitz, of DeWitt Clinton High. Sunday his third-round opponent was Kantowitz, now of LeHigh, and Gillespie won in three tough sets. Billy is somewhat bigger and a lot better than he was in his schoolboy days.

Right now he seems headed for a match with top-seeded Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, who didn't reach the tourney until yesterday and then caught up by means of a convenient default and a couple of easy victories. Billy probably will lose that match, but he has a chance to show how good he is.

Atlanta Soars Within 1 Game Of Those Vols

Carpenter, Kerkiseck, Burgess Fan 17 Smokies in 17 Innings.

By JACK TROY.
In what will go down as one of the most spectacular double-headers played at Ponce de Leon park in many years, the Atlanta Crackers last night bested the Knoxville Smokies twice, 4 to 3 and 1 to 0, to climb within a single game of the league-leading Nashville Vols.

Extending their winning streak to seven games, the Crackers are in a great position to carry the fight to the Vols. They open a four-game series tonight at Durham, N.C., where they will face the Vols.

The second game of last night's double featured two to eight innings and ended in a strictly merit fashion. After seven innings of brilliant and scoreless baseball, Johnny Hill, of Douglasville, stepped up to the plate in the eighth and connected with the first pitch for a home run over the second tier of seats.

BREAKS BAKER'S HEART.
It was a stunning blow for Al Baker, who had engaged in a tremendous pitchers' battle against first baseman Kerkiseck and then Charlie Burgess, who had fanned seven Smokies in six innings. The Smokies obtained only three hits in the thrilling nightcap.

Lewis Carpenter was brilliant in the first game. He pitched four hitless innings, walked four straight times.

FAN THE BREEZE.
Cracker pitchers turned in a total of 17 strikeouts in the two games. Carpenter, of course, fanned eight. Kerkiseck fanned five. Burgess fanned three. The Smokies scored one run in the second game. One of the other two hits off Kerkiseck was an infield hit. And, incidentally, four of the Crackers' seven hits were of the infield variety.

The climbing Crackers now have won 13 of their last 16 games and 19 out of the last 25. And they are right on top of the Vols.

What made last night's nerve-racking double-header even more astonishing was the fact that it was played on wet grounds. The first game was delayed for 20 minutes because of rain after it had been started.

FIRST GAME.
Mauldin led off the first inning for the Smokies with a single, advanced on a passed ball and scored on Meyer's double. Meyer moved on an infield out and scored on Caldwell's error of Ramsey's grounder.

An error was responsible for the Smokies' third run in the second inning. Caldwell walked and Hill threw low to second on Caldwell's fielder's choice. Richmond smacked. Richards, catching Caldwell off second, ran him back toward the bag and threw to Anderson. Anderson made a bad throw to third and Caldwell scored.

The Crackers scored their first two runs in the second inning. Hill walked. Hefey singled and Snydam walked. Then both Richards and Carpenter went out. Meyer to Caldwell, with Hill and Hefey scoring on the infield outs.

The Crackers shot out in front on a two-run rally in the third. Mailho walked. Marshall, Hill and Hefey followed with singles. Mailho and Marshall scoring.

Carpenter retired 13 batters in a row after McCulloch singled in the eighth. Koneff finally got another hit in the eighth. Carpenter then turned back the last six men in a row. He allowed only four hits and fanned eight.

SECOND GAME.
Snydam made the most brilliant catch of the season to pull Kerkiseck out of a hole in the second inning. McCulloch, who walked, and Shelley, who singled, were on base with one out. Caldwell hit a low line drive to center. Snydam off with the crack of the bat, caught the ball around his shoe tops on the dead run, kept his balance and doubled Shelley off first.

The Crackers played spectacular defensive baseball in the fourth, to cut the Smokies down without a run despite the fact that they had the bases loaded with none out.

Sharp Shootin'

THE NATIONAL PUBLIC LINKS CHAMPIONSHIP

Dave Mitchell shifted his 198 pounds in the metal chair which did a little creaking. He leaned back and relaxed.

Dave had just finished leading the field home in the qualifying for Atlanta's National Public Links team. That was Monday at Druid Hills.

He was in the shop waiting for the rest of the fellows to finish. Dave was safe with 74-72-146, a steady bit of golf over a course he had played once in the spring of 1938.

"You won the national meet in 1934, didn't you, Dave?"

"Yes, I was just thinking about it. I'm pretty tired because I didn't play 36 holes much any more. Guess that's what made me think of it."

"You see, I was living in Indianapolis when that tournament was held in Pittsburgh. Yes, that was the year I won."

"Well, I worked through Thursday. We drove all day Friday, played golf all day Saturday and Sunday and started battling in the tournament the next day."

"That 36-holes-per-day business will get you. Anyhow, it got me."

"I got six hours' sleep, and we drove back to Indianapolis the day after the finals."

"When I got home, I had lost 16 pounds."

"That was when I gave up golf for a while. I felt bad, and there wasn't much use in playing a game that way. In fact, the doctor had something to say about that, too."

"Then I hurt my knee and had to give my clubs alone for six months."

"When I got over that—well, I just wasn't as interested in the game as I had been."

Dave is 32 now. His weight has gone up since the days in 1934, when he won the tournament. He doesn't hit the ball as far, either. But that old interest is there again. He's eager to go to Detroit, if business makes it possible.

"You know," he went on, "there are plenty of fine golfers at that tournament—the Public Links, I mean."

"A lot of them have made names for themselves in the National Amateur after winning the Public Links. Take Pat Abbott, the Hollywood extra; McCormick, Frank Strafaci."

Lamb To Show Outdoor Films Thursday Night

Famous Fisherman Brings His Finest Collection to Atlanta.

Jack Lamb, famous fisherman, author and outdoor photographer, will again invade Georgia Thursday night with a series of colored travel pictures which he has just completed in Arizona and old Mexico.

For the past several years Lamb has explored out-of-the-way places in America where he made technical movies of things that interested him, and he stated that his recent collection is more colorful and entertaining than any of his previous filmings.

Last January he went into western Texas and New Mexico where he made pictures of Bill Louncey, famous quail hunter, and his 5,000 dogs in action. Later Lamb moved into Arizona and shot thousands of feet of film at such scenic spots as the Grand Canyon and the Petrified Forest, but his most astounding pictures came when he invaded the Navajo and Hopi Indian reservations, and obtained pictures of the daily life of these tribes.

Lamb is bringing these sensational pictures, together with many others to the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium at 8 o'clock Thursday night.

Florida Votes To Eliminate Free Tickets

GAINEVILLE, Fla., July 9.—(AP)—Passes to University of Florida football games will be restricted hereafter to high officials.

The state board of control, it was announced today, has approved a recommendation of the committee on athletics virtually to eliminate free admissions.

The exceptions will be two tickets available for each game to the Governor and members of his cabinet and Florida members of the national congress. Members of the Florida legislature will be given two tickets for the homecoming game only.

The new policy eliminates tickets heretofore awarded each member of the board of control.

A spokesman for the board said that at Florida's five home games last season 3,378 complimentary tickets had been issued, and that during the previous year an even greater number had been extended.

The "comps" of last football season, it was pointed out, had a value equal to 27 per cent of the Florida team's share of the 1939 football income.

Players, coaches, officials, and necessary game operators, will of course, not be included in the new policy.

The athletic committee said the demand for free admissions had reached "undue proportions."

Host for Sandlot Play Unselected

CARROLLTON, Ga., July 9.—The Carrollton Farmers ready for another invasion by Atlanta's Egan Park Screws tomorrow afternoon, the local sandlotters puzzled over whether they or Gainesville's American Legion would be the hosts for the North Georgia tournament next Friday.

W. J. Ford Jr., business manager for the Farmers, said he had been advised that the DeKalb Barons and other Atlanta teams would come here for the elimination, in pursuance with what he believed was an agreement already made to have the tournament here.

Ford hoped to disentangle the misunderstanding after a conference with Trammell Scott and Legion State Junior Baseball Chairman Weldon at Atlanta tomorrow.

Atlanta boys winning stars were: Billy Greene, Ted and Dick Boshand, Bill Bean, Mason Camp, Stuart Eames, Charles McGee, Charles Elliott, Stephen Fuller, Carl Gaines, Herbert Hopkins, George Harley, Ken Kennedy, Buck Mosley, Walter Newman, Puppy Phillips, Milton Seely, George Smith, Ben Smith, Charles Thrash, Walter and Buddy Young.

South's Crop Losses Placed In the Millions

Georgia Fields Flooded at Many Points; Boll Weevils Spread.

By The Associated Press.
Farmers in the deep south, their fields drenched by more than a week of heavy rains, placed their crop losses at several million dollars today, while weathermen forecast additional precipitation for some sections.

Unless the sun breaks through the thick cloud-blanket that has enveloped widespread areas of the south for the past week, staggering losses might result, agriculturists asserted.

Unseasonably cool temperatures, unfavorable to normal growth of some vegetation, were expected to continue until dispersal of the thick clouds.

Fields Flooded.
Crops were under water in flooded fields also in parts of Georgia, Mississippi and Alabama. Excessive moisture has harmed cotton stands and increased boll weevil infestation throughout the south, while reports from the heart of Georgia's peach belt told of orchards too wet for harvesters to get into them. Harvesters also were unable to reach the Georgia cantaloupe crop because of rain-soaked fields.

Arkansas farm agencies, while declining to estimate in dollars the harm caused crops by excessive rains and floods in several sections of the state, agreed the damage would be heavy.

The state's famous Hope watermelon crop was described as a complete mess, shipment of potatoes has been stopped, and lowland cotton and corn fields were threatened with destruction.

In Louisiana, Extension Director J. W. Bateman reported 15,000 acres of crops—mostly planted to cotton, corn and rice—were lost by inundation. He said the recent torrential rains had injured all crops except sugar cane and pastures.

Mississippi reported bottomlands in the upper reaches of the state were in a worse condition than at a corresponding time in 1939 when a crop failure was almost complete.

Crop damage by heavy rains also was noted in Alabama, and excessive rainfall hindered hay and wheat harvests in Virginia, where the corn crop suffered from lack of cultivation in wet fields.

Virginia.
Sections of Virginia, however, together with large areas in adjacent North Carolina, reported a lack of precipitation, with sections here and there in the grip of a drought. South Carolina's rainfall was said to be "reasonably satisfactory."

Numerous streams in the south were near or at flood stage, but weather observers said they did not expect any immediate flood threat. They pointed out a vast amount of rainfall was necessary to provoke summertime floods.

Bond Proposal Divided Into Three Sections

Voters Will Pass on Only Three If Measure Is Approved.

As the finance committee was approving the bond ordinance, Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta schools, expressed disappointment that more school improvements were not included for schools. Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, chairman of the board of education's building and grounds committee, informed the committee, backed by Ed S. Cook, board president, attempted to have others added but was unsuccessful.

Building Here Is Bought in $70,000 Deal

Western Electric Property Acquired by Atlanta Savings Firm.

Announcement of the sale of the Western Electric Company building at 638 Lee street, S. W., for a purchase price of $70,000, was made yesterday. The building was sold to the Atlanta Savings Properties Company, the deal being handled by C. T. Conyers, of the Conyers Realty Company, assisted by Randolph Carrington.

The building is a two-story structure fronting on Whitehall and Lee streets and containing 58,000 square feet. Western Electric will continue to occupy the building until it moves into its new location on Forrest road about the first of the year. The new owners will then remodel and lease the property as an investment. Legal details were handled by H. F. Greene, for the sellers, and M. F. Goldstein for the purchasers.

Vacationer Kills Self at St. Simons

BRUNSWICK, Ga., June 9.—(AP) His head blown away by a blast from a shotgun, the body of Davis Warren Windsor, 57, member of the faculty of the Guyton schools, was found in his summer home at Glynn Haven, on St. Simons Island, this afternoon.

A coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide. Members of the family, who discovered the body, said they could give no reason for the act.

For several summers, Windsor and his family have spent their vacation at the island resort. He formerly taught school in Calhoun. The funeral will be held here tomorrow afternoon, with the body being sent to Macon for cremation.

Survivors include the wife, one daughter, Miss Mary Windsor, and two sons, Dr. D. W. Windsor Jr. and Phillip Windsor.

Mrs. Wiggins, 31, Dies of Poisoning

Mrs. Bobbie Wiggins, 31, wife of Ralph Wiggins, died yesterday morning at Piedmont hospital after drinking a bottle of poison at her residence on Hutchins road near Jonesboro road, county police reported.

She told persons in the house she was going to "commit suicide," they said. The officers added that no inquest was to be held. Funeral arrangements are in charge of Carmichael's in East Point.

Wife Whipped With 'Hickory' Given Divorce

111 Persons Win Freedom During Hearing of Uncontested Cases.

A father has the right to take a "hickory stick" to his children, but a husband cannot do that to his wife and get by with it, it developed yesterday in Fulton superior court where Judge Virlyn B. Moore and Judge Walter C. Hendrix presided while 111 additional uncontested divorces were granted.

A pretty young woman told Judge Moore she wanted a divorce from the very moment her husband, a good bit older than herself, "took a hickory" to her. "He tried to treat me like a child," she said.

Judge Moore and the jury sympathized with a grown woman whipped with a hickory stick, and she got her divorce, even though the judge did recall there was something in the Bible about a man having the right to chastise his wife.

A man became unmarried again after he told the jury his wife just would not fix the things he liked to eat.

"She never cooked anything I liked," he said, and added that it was seldom she cooked anything at all.

Some 200 cases are to be called today, the last of the three-day special uncontested divorce court of this term.

Atlanta Elected Head Of Three-Family Group

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. CAMILLA, Ga., July 9.—Holcombe T. Green, of Atlanta, was elected president, and Bayard Perry, also of Atlanta, honorary president, of the Spence-Perry-Hillard Family Reunion organization at its annual gathering here Sunday.

Four generations of the families attended the gathering, which was featured by a dinner in celebration of the 87th birthday of Mrs. Mamie Spence Perry. Nearly 100 guests were present.

Other officers named are Mrs. Lynnwood Wingate, of Pelham, secretary, and Mrs. S. H. Floyd, of Camilla, treasurer.

Julian R. Meade Dies; Was Southern Author

DANVILLE, Va., July 9.—(AP) Julian R. Meade, 31-year-old southern author, died in a hospital here today after a brief illness. Among his books were "I Live in Virginia," "Adams' Profession," "The Back Door," and his most recent work, "Bouquets and Bitters."

Welfare Rolls' Boost To Take Four Months

Federal Requirements for Investigating Applicants Are Cited.

Approximately four months will be required to complete addition of 25,000 persons to the public assistance rolls, made possible through an unexpected increase in revenue, because of Federal Social Security Board requirements for investigating and certifying applicants for aged, blind and dependent benefits, George Kennedy, assistant state welfare director, said yesterday.

State Auditor Zach Arnold announced last Friday the welfare department had $398,500 balance on appropriations from the fiscal year ending June 30 and explained there would be $292,500 increase in anticipated revenue for the next year.

Kennedy said the certification work would be completed as quickly as possible. He said they expected a jump in certified applicants before July 25 when the pay-roll period for August closes. Those certified before that date would receive payments August 15.

There are now 39,410 persons receiving benefits, with 85,971 applications pending investigation.

Mrs. J. J. Loeb Succumbs Here At Age of 79

Funeral for Well-Known Atlantan Will Be Held Today.

Mrs. Joseph J. Loeb, 79, well known in Atlanta social and club activities, died yesterday at her residence, 1428 Peachtree street.

A native of Rome, Mrs. Loeb had spent most of her life here, where she was for many years an active member of the D. A. B. and the Habersham chapter, U. D. C. Her late husband was for many years a well known Atlanta businessman.

She is survived by four daughters, Mrs. Victor Markowitz and Miss Mabel Hillier Loeb, of Atlanta; Mrs. Harry L. Dix, of Rome, and Mrs. Grattan S. Condon, of New York; a son, Lee J. Loeb, of Atlanta, and a sister, Mrs. Harry L. Schlesinger, of Atlanta.

Funeral rites will be held at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at Spring Hill, with Mrs. Merrill Hutchinson, Christian Science reader, officiating. Burial will be in Oakland cemetery.

Writ Is Filed To Stop Sale Of Clubhouse

Insurance Company Claims Mortgage on Property.

An injunction petition to restrain Tax Collector T. Earl Suttles from selling the Atlanta Woman's Club property for back taxes was filed yesterday in Fulton superior court by the Volunteer Life Insurance Company, which set out it held a $40,000 mortgage on the club and grounds.

The Woman's Club is one of several private clubs which have had assessments revalued and tax executions issued against them as the result of the efforts of G. H. Howard Sr., former superior court judge.

Suttles said he had planned to sell the woman's clubhouse for back taxes for the years from 1933 through 1939. The insurance company set out it had offered to pay the taxes for 1937 through 1939 but that the collector had refused to take the money and give the company the f. f. as. The mortgage was placed on the property in 1937.

Suttles declared he had been advised to refuse to take the part payment on back taxes and to sell the property unless all delinquent taxes were paid. Total involved is more than $2,000.

Kiwanians Hear Talk

On Food Stamp Sales

Earle W. Dahlberg, program organizer for the Surplus Marketing Administration, spoke to the Atlanta Kiwanis Club yesterday at its weekly meeting in the Ansley hotel. His subject was "Marketing in Retail Food Stores Through Use of Food Order Stamps."

He advised extensive advertising in counties adjacent to Fulton, and said that a survey to determine the possibility of this action had disclosed that many of the Atlanta and Fulton county retail merchants would be unable to co-operate financially.

A display of the food products of the state was viewed by members at the meeting.

Atlantans Attend Ball Given In Honor of Miss Butler

Mr. and Mrs. James D. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. James D. Robinson Jr., Bobby Bray and Walter McCord have returned from Buffalo, N. Y., where they attended the brilliant ball given in honor of Miss Kate Butler, by Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Butler, her parents. The social event took place at the Delaware avenue residence of Mr. and Mrs. Butler, and was called "Un Blanc Bal."

Some 2,000 roses were used to decorate the fountain in the garden. Roses festooned the sides and floated on the blue waters of the fountain. The walls of the living room were hung with white cornucopias filled with white flowers, and the white marble staircase was lined with flowers which were sent to Miss Butler by admiring friends.

The garage was converted into a night club, and an orchestra discoursed the musical program. Dark blue walls, a blue ceiling lighted with scintillating stars, and tables covered with silver cloths, added a festive note to the occasion. Supper was served in the garage, and breakfast was served at 6 o'clock in the morning in the garden.

Mrs. Charles R. Clapp, Miss Josephine Clapp, Raymond Demere and Shelby Myrick, of Savannah, were among guests attending the ball.

Series of Parties To Honor Miss Clippinger and Fiance

A series of interesting parties has been planned in compliment to Miss Jane Clippinger and her fiance, James Lockwood, whose wedding takes place August 3.

The first of these is a miscellaneous bridge shower to be given tomorrow by Mrs. J. Harris Dew at her home on Peachtree road.

On Friday Miss Joe Lorraine Estes will be hostess to the bridal pair and five couples at a dinner-dance in the Spanish room of the Henry Grady hotel.

Next Wednesday evening Miss Minnie Trautwein will give a kitchen shower at her home on Austin avenue for the bride-elect. Thirty guests have been invited.

Miss Hazel Mindling will honor Miss Clippinger and Mr. Lockwood July 20 at a bridge party at her home on Johnson road.

On July 21 Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Pyle and John Hughes will give a buffet supper for the members of the wedding party.

Dr. Amey Chappell has planned a bridge party for July 24 at her home on Peachtree way for the young couple and a few of their friends.

Miss Margaret Adkins has invited friends of the bride-elect to a linen shower July 29.

On July 31 the bridesmaids' dinner will be held at Miss Clippinger's home on Peachtree way.

Mrs. William Beresford will be hostess at a buffet supper August 1 at her home on Rivers road honoring the bride-elect.

Dr. and Mrs. K. C. Rice will entertain after the rehearsal August 2. The wedding party, out-of-town guests and a few close friends have been invited.

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Kennedy, of Tucker, will entertain Miss Clippinger and Mr. Lockwood, as will Mrs. Harriet Ruse, the dates to be announced later.

For Miss Maddox.

Miss Ann Catherine Maddox, of Biloxi, is the feted guest of her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Meyer, here.

Saturday evening the following young people were present at a party complimenting Miss Maddox: Misses Jo Jo Callaway, Catherine Brackett, Jane Snyder, Dorothy Jane Nahlix, Louise Clayton,

Mildred Langford, Frances Stewart,

art, and L. C. Kidd, Dick Hollis,

Buddy Snyder, George Stewart, John Myer.

To Look Cool and Exquisite You Must Feel That Way

By Lillian Mae.

There was a time when the Real Lady would no more use perfume in daytime than she would apply to her complexion anything stronger than a mere dusting of talcum powder. In the evening she used just the faintest breath possible of fragrances. Now, a lady just doesn't feel like a lady unless she does have about her at all times a perfume fragrance—day and evening. Particularly during wilting hot weather, does an informal fragrance seem most necessary. It is practically essential as a finishing touch to the fresh, feminine look of summertime.

A quick rub with toilet water is just about the world's best substitute for the refreshing effect of a cool bath. Have you ever tried, while on a long, tiresome trip, dipping a pad of cotton in cool water, dashing on it some toilet water and wiping over your face? And on your wrists? Try this when you are hot, tired and dusty.

Spray toilet water into your hair and over your hands. I know of no way to better encourage a summer romance than this.

There is a line of perfumes which long has been considered just about tops—certainly so far as a medium price is concerned. There are several very lovely odors in the line, and now each has been incorporated into an informal fragrance which is sufficiently inexpensive to be used as lavishly as you wish, and at the same time throw off that same scent which you use in your more formal moments.

For use of the traveler and for the businesswoman, there is a little folding case which holds a bottle of this informal fragrance and a tin of talcum in whichever of the several odors you prefer. It is ideal to slip into an overnight bag or in the car pocket for trips. It's also a lovely thought for a hostess-gift or shower.

Phone me for the name of this fragrance. Write me if you do not live in Atlanta, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Bette Davis, dynamic star of Warner Bros. "All This and Heaven Too," always poised and self-assured, would recommend a perfume of informal fragrance—one which gives you a finishing touch, dainty and feminine.

Crisp Trimming

First vote of most any fashion-wise woman goes to the princess style every time. This semi-tailored frock by Lillian Mae, Pattern 4497, shows the reason for its popularity. See for yourself how slim and supple those long, straight seams of the princess style are by any fussy details. The simplicity of the frock is relieved by a decorative collar, shaped in gay points and smart in either self or contrasting fabric. You might add matching cuffs, if you use short sleeves, and lace edging, buttons and a ribbon bow make soft, feminine touches. The Sewing Instructor makes this frock so simple that even a timid beginner will have no difficulty.

Pattern 4497 is available in misses' and women's sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32. Size 16 takes 3-1/4 yards 39-inch fabric and 1-2 yard contrast.

Send 15 cents in coins for this Lillian Mae pattern. Do not send stamps. Write plainly your size, name, address and style number. Lillian Mae's latest pattern book will help you enjoy each shining hour of summertime with new styles in easy-to-use patterns. Everything you need for air-cooled chic including sun-and-surf modes, town wear, travel take-alongs, day and evening sheers and cottons. Clothes that go all around the family circle from littlest sister through teen-ager, bride and matron. Send your order now! Book, 15 cents.

Today's Charm Tip. For the Business Girl: When you start saying: "How tired I am" it's time to plan a new type of leisure-time interest, hobby, pursuit. You need a new mental outlook.

Luncheon Conversation With Claudette Covers Love, Health, War and Work

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, July 9.—To lunch with Claudette Colbert in the Paramount Cafe (she is making "Arise My Love" for this company), and we take in with our nourishment a wide variety of subjects—from the happiness of her married life, her grief over missing relatives in France, picture problems, health problems, and a pre-request not to mention in this column the actual name of her doctor husband! "It puts him in wrong with the other doctors," they don't like the publicity."

Okay, Claudette. About that divorce story... (this column not guilty!) "My husband and I were having fun at Sun Valley when my mother telephoned and told us we were getting a divorce, according to a writer. Why did she pick on us? We are so obviously happy. We mind our own business and don't interfere with anyone else. If we had been getting a divorce, we'd have admitted it. What would have been the use of a denial? People would have found out anyway." "But Lana Turner and Alice Faye denied just that very thing, and now look—" this reporter reminds her.

"Yes, I know some people would deny that they were getting a divorce—but not us. Oh, well," concludes Claudette. "I've given up worrying about it. Everyone will see in time that the item was wrong."

About the war... "It's like a dream," says Claudette. "I can't believe it has happened—that France (Claudette was born in Paris as Lily Chauchon) is no longer a free country. I would have liked them to fight on and on. The last mother and I heard of our relatives there they were 100 miles south of Paris. We've sent cables and letters to them—but no replies." (All of Claudette's spare time is devoted to refugee and Red Cross work for the Allies.)

About picture work... "I make three a year," Claudette tells me (at a price ranging from $150,000 to $125,000 per picture). This year's quota—"Boom Town," with Gable, Tracy and Hedy Lamar. The current "Arise My Love" (co-starring Ray Milland)—to be followed by "Ski-lark," movie version of Gertrude Lawrence's successful play. "After that I get a vacation—I hope," concludes Claudette.

About health—and in particular about Miss Colbert's sinus—"My sinus trouble was cured years ago," affirms Claudette (her husband is one of the best nose and throat specialists here. That's how Claudette met him.) "But the last time you mentioned it in your column about three years ago," continues Claudette, "something awful happened. A man from Kansas City wrote to me, suggesting a long-distance cure based on mind over matter. Then came a threat and a request for $1,000."

"My husband turned the letter over to the police. They traced it to a clerk working in a Kansas City bank. He had been—and was—a lunatic. He is safely locked up now. But you can imagine the feelings of the people in the bank!"

THESE WOMEN! —By d'Alessio

"She just hopped over it to pass by, and I guess that's how it started."

THE WOMAN'S QUIZ

Q. Should epsom salt be fed to plants?

A. Generally it should not, and the only time it might be used is when there is a deficiency of magnesium, but usually fertilizers contain sufficient quantities to make the use of epsom salts unnecessary.

Q. How may I bleach a Panama hat which has become discolored?

A. Use a solution of one teaspoon of oxalic acid in one pint of water, which should be applied with a brush and rinsed off thoroughly as soon as the whole hat is bleached.

Q. What can I do to make thick syrup that is not too sweet, when canning fruits?

A. Use one-fourth dextrose and three-fourths sucrose.

Q. What can be used to clean a canvas awning?

A. Scrub it first with a stiff brush to remove the dust, then apply soft soap and rub briskly with a fibre brush of suitable size. If the dirt is stubborn, add a little ammonia to the soft soap. When cleaned, use plenty of clear water to remove the soap and let the canvas dry.

Family House Party Gathers At Home of Mrs. J. L. DeGive

• • • THERE IS AN atmosphere of gaiety prevailing at the Wiecua road residence of Mrs. J. L. DeGive, where, for the first time in many months, all the children of this charming Atlanta matron have gathered for a visit. The presence of the entire family has turned the gathering into a house party, made all the more delightful by the presence of an attractive visitor, Margaret Cussler, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Foremost among the family circle is that gadabout, Mary L. DeGive, who spends entirely too much of her time away from her Atlanta friends. For the past year, Mary L. has been at Harvard University, where she is working for her Ph.D. degree in sociology. Her visit here is a sort of "recess" from her work, for she plans to leave during the coming weekend for Bath, S. C., to continue her study.

Her work at Bath is a distinct honor, for there she will join Dr. Carl Zimmerman, head of the sociology department at Harvard, and will be his assistant for summer classes in sociology. It was because of her high scholastic rating that the Atlanta was chosen from a large class of students to assist Dr. Zimmerman during the coming session of community study. At the completion of her summer course, Mary L. will make a brief visit here before going back to Boston to enter upon a teaching career as assistant instructor in sociology at Wellesley College.

Accompanying Mary L. to Atlanta was her classmate, the aforementioned Margaret Cussler. This brilliant young girl is also working for her Ph.D. degree in English at Harvard. She, too, will go to Bath, where she will serve as assistant for community study in English.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert DeGive arrived last evening from Miami to visit their mother for some time, and Mr. and Mrs. Julius DeGive and their young son, Julius III, also of Miami, arrived last week. With such a house full of guests, it is there any wonder that Mrs. DeGive is one of the happiest matrons in Atlanta this week!

Miss Minter Weds Donald W. Jones

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Minter of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Sarah Minter, to Donald Weems Jones, of Atlanta, formerly of Carrollton, on July 6, at 4 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents in Hapeville. Rev. E. C. Wilson, pastor of the Hapeville Methodist church, performed the ring ceremony in the presence of relatives and friends.

Palms, ferns and pink and white gladioli formed a background in the living room where the vows were taken. The bride was given in marriage by her father, O. W. Roberts Jr., of Carrollton, was best man.

The bride wore a brown chiffon dress, fashioned with Eton jacket, picture hat to match, and accessories of brown and white. She wore a shoulder bouquet of tall-tower roses and valley lilies.

Miss Elizabeth Minter, of Baltimore, Md., was her sister's only attendant. She wore a model of cream and white crepe with embroidered jacket. Her flowers were tall-tower roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was given. Those assisting were Miss Elizabeth Minter and Mrs. James Colvin.

After a wedding trip through the Smoky mountains the couple will reside with the bride's parents on Fulton avenue, Hapeville.

Flora Wright, of London, Relates First-Hand War News

By JANE ADAIR.

With the sophisticated charm and poise for which the women of her country are famed, lovely Flora Wright, of London, arrived in Atlanta yesterday—a refugee from war-torn England. Though she has experienced the hardships and some of the horrors of a country plunged into the world conflict, war has taken no toll of the attractive and vivacious young girl who returned to her native England scarcely three years ago, after making her formal bow to Atlanta society. Rather it has served to heighten her charm and to emphasize the poise and graciousness which she possessed in marked degree as an Atlanta debutante.

Flora arrived in New York aboard the Cunard liner, Scythia, last Sunday after an uneventful 12-day crossing. She was met in New York by her grandmother, Mrs. Edward T. Donnelly, of Atlanta, and the pair came immediately to Atlanta where Flora will spend some time as the guest of relatives. The Scythia brought to America some 1,000 British refugees, most of whom were children. The voyage was rather disappointing to the English belle, being much like any other crossings, except that the boat followed a zig-zag course and the passengers were forced to sleep fully clothed and wearing their life preservers.

Life goes on pretty much as usual in London, according to Flora, except for the complete blackouts of the city and the frequent air raid alarms. For instance, the night before she sailed from Liverpool, Flora spent four hours in a bombproof cellar, while German bombers roared overhead. The experience was by no means enjoyable, she declares.

THE MORTAL STORM

Seppel Waits For Freya and Hans At the Other End of the Tunnel

By PHYLLIS BOTTOME.

SYNOPSIS.
Against the wishes of her Nazi stepbrother, Freya Roth moves to her home Hans Breiter, a young Communist who has rescued her from a group of angry peasants during one of her satanic expeditions and to whom, despite his philosophy she has been immediately attracted. When Hans is attacked by Olat and Emil as well as by Freya's aristocratic admirer, Fritz Laber, Freya's disgust of the Nazi regime grows. Visiting the estate of Fritz's parents, long friends of the Roths, Freya is pursued by young Mayberg. Instantly she admits that she is in love with Hans, much to Fritz's horror. Aware that it has long been the plan of the Mobergs and the Roths for Freya and Fritz to marry, Freya goes to his mother, the Grafin von Moberg, and tells her that she will not marry Fritz. The Grafin, already vaguely apprehensive because Freya is half-Jewish, pretends to understand Freya's attitude toward her son. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT XXVII.

Beneath Freya the tiny light bobbed and glimmered; the iron rungs she slipped down, one by one, seemed interminable. There was some enough to breathe, though it had a heavy, earthy smell. When Freya reached the ground, she found that by clinging to Hans with one hand, she could just shuffle along bent double, between the tunnel walls. The surface of the ground was uneven after a few moments they began to climb. The space contracted, until they could only progress on their hands and knees. At last they came up against a blank wall. Hans held up his flashlight and searched it steadily, passing his hand over all the bricks in turn, until he satisfied himself that one was of a slightly different texture to the others—yielding to pressure—the brick uncovered a spring; and a section of what had seemed solid wall swung open; in front of them was the live night air.

Hans switched off the lamp. "Now there is nothing but the dark!" he whispered. "I am used to walking in it. Keep hold of my hand—the road is near. There will be light enough soon!" There was uneven after his hand between Freya and dissolution. The ground was a trap for her feet, the trees she slipped between, dragged at her like spiteful enemies. Sometimes beneath their feet a twig snapped with the report of a pistol. There was no sound but their breathing, but Freya thought anyone could have heard that miles away.

A faint glow broke up the curtain of the night. Freya saw that they were near the edge of a little wood, only a few trees and a broad ditch separated them from the open road.

Hans stopped, withdrew his hand from Freya's, let himself down into the ditch and held out his arms. "I am just as happy," Freya thought, slipping into them, "as if I were safe and we were doing this for fun!"

The road was empty. Hans held her close, and kissed her as if he were leaving his life behind him on her lips.

Two huge headlights sent their long shafts down the road, as if feeling for them. Hans signalled to the lorry with his flashlight, it heaved over them like a toppling wave, perking itself to a noisy standstill.

Seppel's head peered out from its covered back. Hans lifted Freya towards him, and sprang in after her. The lorry moved on as if it had never paused.

Freya had not even seen who sat in front to drive it. Once more she was in the dark, pressed close between huge sacks, out of which came a stuffy sort of heat, the most choking of them. Freya slowly grew used to the heavy dusty smell, she felt Hans draw her gently against his breast; his heart beat close to her ears, very strong and slowly; but soon whether it was the heat, or the heat, or the throb of the lorry engine, or the waves of a troubled sea—Freya could not have told—for she had fallen fast asleep.

Freya gazed at the retreating lorry with a desire to punish something, or someone, for the extreme inconvenience of her sensations. She felt dishevelled, and pinched by the dawn wind. No one was to blame for it but herself and yet if you have a lover surely he should manage better than to stand beside you in your extremity, looking like a half-frozen bird, ruffling out its feathers and without a word of commiseration or self-reproach?

Hans' flaxen hair, dusted white, stood up in fantastic clumps all over his head; his face was smeared and streaked with flour, his eyelashes thickened and white as an Albino's.

Worse than what Hans looked like to her, was what Freya knew that she must look like to him, and yet he had the insane tactlessness to exclaim—blinking at her between the stiff floured rows of his eyelashes—"If you only knew what you looked like!"

Freya turned her back on him, and stared stonily at the water, grim and unspectacular as a prison door.

On the other side of the road, a sodden haystack was afloat upon a flooded field; short uneasy trees stood knee-deep in the water, shivering a little, as the dawn wind drew a claw over its steely surface.

Hans stood stock-still with his hands in his pockets, as if he were waiting for something.

He did not seem able to carry off the situation of having accompanied with a willing girl, pursued by enemies.

It was as if he expected to be reassured, when he should himself have been reassuring.

Freya swallowed nervously she couldn't very well say to Hans: "If you'll admire me, I can still be brave, but if you aren't going to admire me, I shan't even want to be!" After a moment or two of blank discomfort she ceased to desire to impress Hans, and longed instead for her warm little room at home—so clean and bright—blankets of the thickest wool—curtains of daffodil yellow—a soft pillow to burrow in—hot coffee on the table downstairs sending in a blue clarity of air; but the snow had already melted from their lower slopes, into a dazzling green.

All down the mountainside, the stream ran, gay as a child, with kingcups splintering the hillside in a broad golden crack. "Oh, Hans! Hans!" Freya cried, seizing her arm with grateful compunction—for it seemed to her as if she owed it to Hans, that for one splendid instant the snow peaks and the kingcups filled the world—"Oh, Hans—how could I have known it would be like this?"

Hans looked at Freya with eyes so full of joy, that Freya felt her own sparkling to meet them. "Why did you come?" he whispered, knowing well the answer.

The sun, that had at first spread only a thin golden veil across the mountain, grew slowly deeper and more powerful, until it reached their bodies, and warmed the very cockles of their hearts.

"Frau Bauer slipped something into my rucksack last night," Hans said. "I didn't have time to ask what it was—but let's look—it might be food!"

They fell upon it, too hungry to talk, but every now and then pausing to laugh into each other's eyes.

The sun had flung itself full upon them by now and every bud of the kingcups had opened wide its gold.

They ate all they wanted, and drank out of hands hollowed into cups. Slowly into their laughter crept little silences; it was as if their hearts spoke a deeper language behind the screen of their gaiety.

No other life than theirs was in sight. The pine woods lay far below them, a mere dark fringe to the valley floor. The foothills hid the villages, and the valley itself looked a hundred miles away.

Hans turned towards Freya with absorbed, beseeching eyes. "Freya," he asked her again, "why did you come?" Her heart checked its unconscious easy beat, as if it knew that now she must attend wholly to this question.

"I came," she said slowly, but without hesitation, "to give you everything I had."

Continued Tomorrow.

AUNT HET

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

"Cousin Jim knows the secret of sellin'. If you act humble and anxious, folks act haughty and turn you down; if you seem rich and indifferent, they grab for the hook."

While Freya watched him, he unwound the tight brush of his tail, and swung off again. His little lively paws were as sure and swift on the swaying branches, as a great pianist's fingers on the keys of a piano.

Freya would have liked to draw Hans' attention to the squirrel. The wall but her dress had grown as thin as the dark. Hans was not far ahead of her, she could hear him kicking pine-cones off the narrow path, but could one end so terrible a thing as a desire to desert a lover, by drawing his attention to the antics of a squirrel?

The little stream broke out close beside her, from the sheltering trees, noisy and clear, close to a waterfall.

Kingcups curled their gold into hard knobby buds, stretching against their green sheaths; their stems wading in and out of the stream; their shiny green leaves fluttering the water up the little waves. The mosses on the path grew a faint green, and the black pine stems suddenly turned pink.

Through the thinning trees Freya caught a glimpse of the high meadows.

Birds stopped their short sleepy calls, and began tuning up into long busy breakfast raptures. Clear and liquid, splashed the note of a blackbird, as if he had found a way of catching the shining drops from the brambles and flinging them into the air.

Jays shrieked suddenly; starlings kept up an indefinite gossiping chatter; woodpeckers began their interminable cautious tapping, and wood-pigeons cooed and clucked, and crashed their heavy wings against undergrowth, as if determined to break up the security that they were seeking. A ray of sunshine sprang across the path, and caught a baby rabbit in the very act of blotting itself into a dead leaf, but Freya's terrific approach was too much for its newly-acquired knowledge—with a scattering rush it made off through the trees—the white stump of its tail shining as it ran.

"Hans! Hans!" Freya called, "I almost caught a baby rabbit!" Hans stopped at once, and when Freya came up with him, he looked quite different.

The white flour on his hair was rather becoming now, and he too, had cleaned his face and hands in the stream.

They were so near the edge of the trees that they could watch the light race down the mountain-side in a great golden wave.

The snow peaks of the Wetterstein stood higher than the sun. They hung, ice-white and solitary,

CONSTITUTION WANT ADS BRING RESULTS

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES)—The entire day favors general business, financial transactions, educational and literary matters, but does not favor assuming new and heavy obligations. After 3:07 p. m. especially favors dealings with heads of organizations, for making future plans, but does not favor putting them into action until later. The evening hours favor entertainment and social activities.

April 20th and May 20th (TAURUS)—Before 1:36 p. m. think carefully before entering into obligations. Not an especially auspicious time for dealings with women, matters of art and domestic affairs. Between 1:36 p. m. and 5:12 p. m. favors industrial matters. The remainder of the day favors sticking to routine matters. After 5:12 p. m. practical affairs requiring tact should proceed with ease.

June 21st and July 22nd (CANCER)—Previous to 12:33 p. m. does not especially favor matters dealing with women, art or affairs concerning adornment. The remainder of the day favors affairs of a solid and conservative nature and those things that require time to consummate.

July 23rd and August 22nd (LEO)—The period between 6:27 a. m. and 10:26 a. m. favors attention to unusual pursuits, getting work done quickly. After 10:26 a. m. does not favor new beginnings.

August 23rd and September 22nd (VIRGO)—The entire day favors putting into effect new plans upon which you have been working. Business ventures where tact and diplomacy are required should prove successful.

CONCERT—"An Opera Ballet" by the noted American composer Vittorio Giannini will be performed by the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra at the Lewisohn Stadium in New York during the second of this season's Columbia network broadcasts from the summer music center over WGST at 8:30 o'clock tonight.

Giannini, composer of two successful stage operas and two others for radio on commission from Columbia, has written this ballet music as part of a new opera as yet unfinished. While directly related to the action of the opera, it is complete in itself.

COMEDY—Lou Costello, hoping to learn what his radio salary will be this summer, will call in accounts to call his partner to financial account when the second program of the summer "Hour of Smiles" is broadcast over WSB at 8 o'clock tonight. Lou thought he would get rich on his summer salary, until he heard Bud ask him to call for change for 50 cents so he could pay off Costello.

Songstress Benay Venetia, announcer Harry von Zell and band leader Peter Van Steeden will assist the whacky comedians in unfolding the musical-comedy show, and, incidentally, solve the financial problems of the pair.

THEATER—Kenny Baker and Frances Langford will present his vocalizations of the season's top-ranking tunes, with former announcer Jimmy Wallington hitting a high-stepping stride in his new role as master of ceremonies in the summer season of "Star Theater" during its broadcast to be heard over WGST at 8 o'clock tonight.

David Broekman's Orchestra, retained in the new half-hour format by popular demand of the public, will assist the vocalists in addition to providing a bit of musical fare himself.

The program includes: "Rhapsody in Blue," "Because," "South of the Border," "Dreaming Out Loud," "You're Lonely and I'm Lonely." CLASS—Another session of the weekly "College of Musical Knowledge" will be called to order by the old professor, Kay Kyser, over WSB at 9 o'clock tonight. Students will be given their examinations and the "pupils" with the highest average will leave school a little to the good financially.

Vocals will be provided by Ginny Simms, Harry Babbitt and Sully Mason and music will be furnished by the Kyser orchestra during recesses. The program includes: "Who's Yehudi?" "Somebody Stole My Gal," "I'm Stepping Out With a Memory," "Imagination," "When Buddha Smiles," "In the Mood," "What's What," "The Breeze and I," "Make Believe Island," "Night Ride," "In the Mood."

12 MIDNIGHT. WGST—Al Kavelin's Music. WSB—Sleepy Hollow. WAGA—Sign Off. WATL—Music. 12:30 A. M. WGST—Joe Rines' Music; 12:35, News and Orchestra. WSB—Jan Smith's Music; 12:45, News and Orchestra. SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

Your Own Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Chirologist.

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES)—The entire day favors general business, financial transactions, educational and literary matters, but does not favor assuming new and heavy obligations. After 3:07 p. m. especially favors dealings with heads of organizations, for making future plans, but does not favor putting them into action until later. The evening hours favor entertainment and social activities.

April 20th and May 20th (TAURUS)—Before 1:36 p. m. think carefully before entering into obligations. Not an especially auspicious time for dealings with women, matters of art and domestic affairs. Between 1:36 p. m. and 5:12 p. m. favors industrial matters. The remainder of the day favors sticking to routine matters. After 5:12 p. m. practical affairs requiring tact should proceed with ease.

June 21st and July 22nd (CANCER)—Previous to 12:33 p. m. does not especially favor matters dealing with women, art or affairs concerning adornment. The remainder of the day favors affairs of a solid and conservative nature and those things that require time to consummate.

July 23rd and August 22nd (LEO)—The period between 6:27 a. m. and 10:26 a. m. favors attention to unusual pursuits, getting work done quickly. After 10:26 a. m. does not favor new beginnings.

August 23rd and September 22nd (VIRGO)—The entire day favors putting into effect new plans upon which you have been working. Business ventures where tact and diplomacy are required should prove successful.

September 23rd and October 22nd (LIBRA)—The morning hours and until 11:04 a. m. suggests holding an extra check on your nerves. The period between 11:04 a. m. and 2:00 p. m. suggests holding an extra check on your nerves. The period between 2:00 p. m. and 5:04 p. m. suggests holding an extra check on your nerves. The period between 5:04 p. m. and 8:00 p. m

Willkie Studies the Latest Twists in Politics

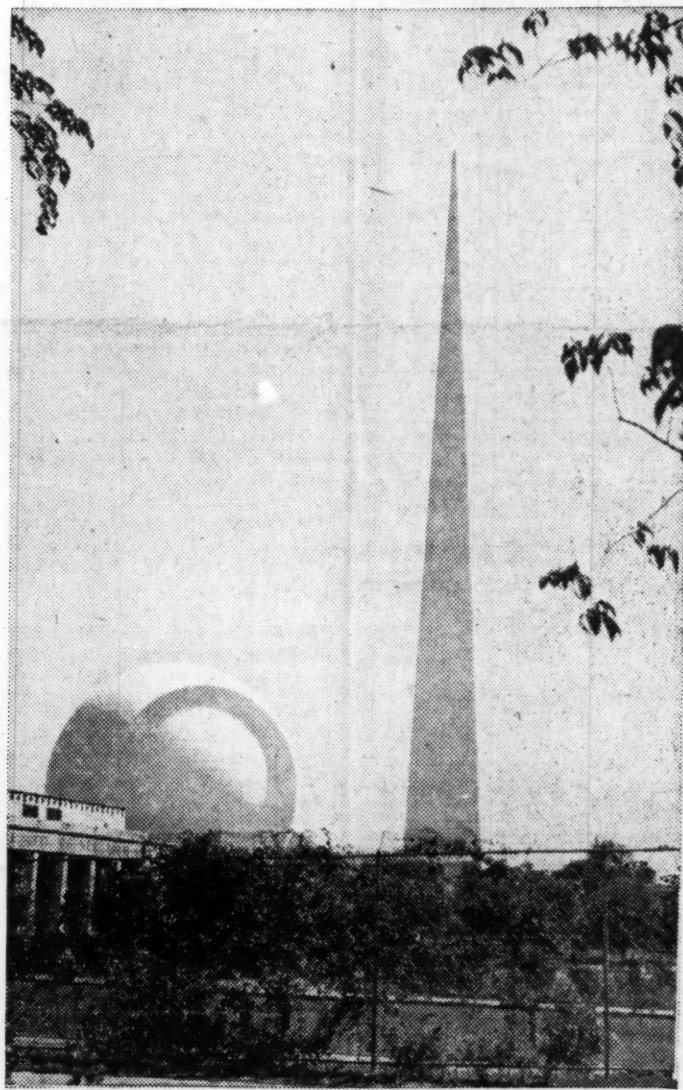

WILLKIE BRUSHES UP on his politics. Dropping into a bookstore, he made a beeline for the table labeled "Economics and Politics." With the Republican nominee for president is Franklyn Wolfman (behind sign), Republican publicity chief. Clerk Sidney Avery is giving the candidate a sales talk.

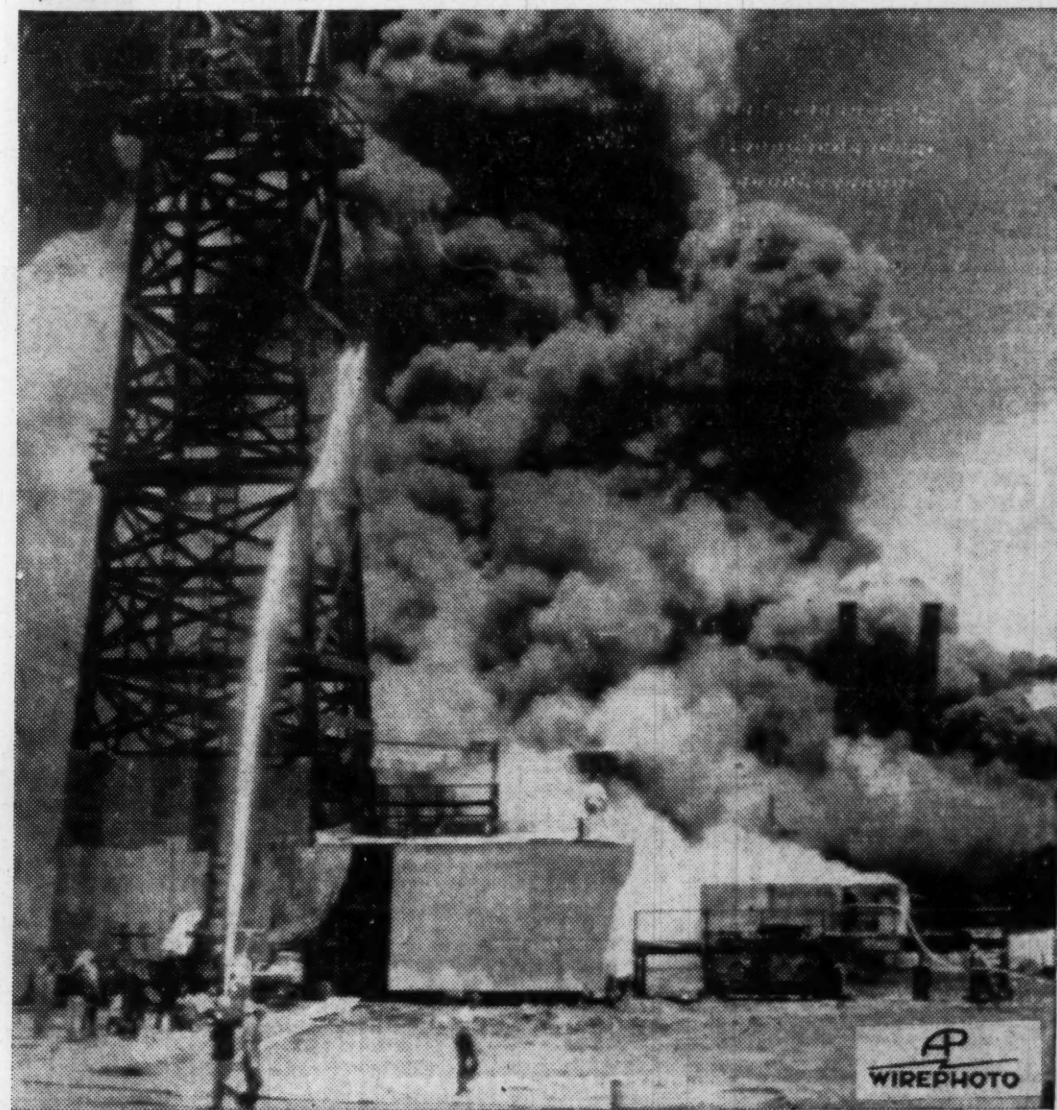

KEEPS LIPS BUTTONED Postmaster Farley (right) indulged in many expressive gestures when he arrived in Chicago yesterday for work preliminary to the Democratic convention opening July 15, but he kept completely mum on the big, momentous secret of President Roosevelt's third-term intentions.

'NO ROMANCE' That was the retort of James Roosevelt (right) when he arrived in New York from Boston by plane, accompanied by a smartly dressed, striking brunette (entering cab). Interviewers sought without success to learn the young woman's identity.

A BLAST AND BLAZES of undetermined origin wrecked the Vaca Asphalt Company's plant at Oxnard, Calif. Damage was estimated at more than $200,000. Three-hundred-foot flames destroyed storage tanks and menaced an oil well.

COUPLE OF 'CITIZENS' The army's new citizens' military training camp at Fort McPherson has attracted many Dixie leaders—and also this couple of up-and-coming "citizens" with their dog. They're children of officers stationed at the fort.

WAR-LIKE is this scene at the opening of the army's new citizens' military training camp at Fort McPherson. J. G. Alexander, Atlanta attorney, is being fitted with a gas mask by Lieutenant D. C. Foster, of the 22d infantry. Ellis Irwin, of New Orleans, watches.

MY HERO! Seven-year-old Glenn Englett, who's son of an army officer and has ideas of some day filling his papa's military shoes, like this business of playing soldier at the civilian's camp at Fort McPherson. It gives him a chance to bask in Eleanor Brown's admiration.
